Lawyer-Free
Divorce Case
Bucks AdageBy PATTY BEUTLER and BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writers

A familiar adage claims that the lawyer who represents himself in court has a fool for a client.

Presumably, then, the layman who goes to court on his own behalf must be even more foolish. Not only does he lack objectivity, but he's wanting in legal expertise.

Yet, some people are bucking that bit of conventional wisdom and are doing their own legal work, at least in simple matters.

Take the case of Patrick and Judy Douglass of Lincoln who recently got a divorce without hiring a lawyer.

Taking an admittedly "hit-and-miss" approach, they were amicably divorced April 28 for $26, or at a savings they estimated at $324.

Yet only six divorce cases of the 1,096 filed in Lancaster Court last year were done without the aid of an attorney.

They 'Couldn't See' It

"It was kind of a hassle," Ms. Douglass said. "We knew absolutely nothing, but we couldn't see forking out $350 for a lawyer just to sign a bunch of papers."

Finding their way through the legal maze for them was comparatively easy since their divorce was uncontested.

Nevertheless their petition was tossed out of court once, and the country court clerk, she said, thought they were crazy to try to divorce themselves.

Their biggest problem was knowing how to fill out the forms and learning what steps to take.

For the petition, she said, "We practically copied word for word from someone else's petition." Similarly, she said they copied "the fancy wording" from filed divorce decrees.

Reflecting on her experience, she said, "I wish there was somebody somewhere who could've helped someone like us. It would save a lot of people a heck of a lot of money."

Ms. Douglass said she believes more people would do their own simple legal work if they knew they could and if they knew what steps to follow.

Their Case Is Typical

The Douglasses' case is typical of the rise of do-it-yourself law in response to what some people feel are inflated attorney fees for what they perceive as glorified secretarial or clerical work.

Although a person can represent himself in any legal matter, do-it-yourself law is almost always limited to straightforward legal matters such as uncontested divorces, wills, title research, tenant disputes and debt collections.

It began to build steam about 10 years ago when Norman F. Dacey, a Bridgeport, Conn., estate planner, wrote a $4.95 book entitled "How To Avoid Probate."

At the time, lawyers tried to get an injunction to bar its publication and the Connecticut Bar Association issued a pamphlet denouncing Dacey's book.

Dacey countered with a libel suit, and in June 1974 he was awarded a $60,000 judgment against the bar. Incidentally, Dacey apparently knew when he did need a lawyer, since he hired one to argue his libel case.

In California, a group of young poverty lawyers has been publishing six how-to-do legal guides for laymen under the name Nolo Press. Ralph Warner, a Nolo Press founder, said the purpose "is not to put lawyers out of business but to get legal information to people especially where legal paper-shuffling is involved."

Five In Between

Warner said he realized the need for such information during his time with Legal Aid. For every person he helped, he said there were five who did not qualify but still did not have sufficient income to afford an attorney.

Warner said, in a telephone interview, "With all the present levels of competence in society, most people can do a great many legal things for themselves once they have the simple information necessary."

Steps have been taken in Nebraska to simplify legal procedures. For instance, a new simplified probate law becomes effective in January 1977. Small Claims Courts have been established where laymen can argue their cases without any aid or interference from lawyers.

In Lancaster County Small Claims Court, 1,023 cases have been filed since January 1973. Municipal Small Claims Court reported 1,127 cases for the same period.

Workmen's Compensation Court also provides an informal legal setting where people can represent themselves. Of the 381 cases brought up for first hearings last year, 45 or 12% were handled without lawyers. Only four out of 104 second hearing cases, however, were without counsel.

Local judges agree generally that the do-it-yourself litigant is at "a tremendous disadvantage," especially if the other side has a lawyer.

Judges Put On Spot

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront said judges are "kind of on the spot" when people attempt to do things themselves. As a person, he said he wants to help people but as a judge he cannot advise them how to handle their cases.

There are so many technicalities in the law, he said, that people representing themselves could lose more money than they would save by not hiring an attorney.

County Judge Ralph Slocum said people should never represent themselves in criminal actions unless they are versed in rules of evidence and plea bargaining.

Civil cases, he said, are too technical for self-representation and are commonly settled out of court prior to trial.

But Municipal Judge Thomas McManus said that in traffic cases the self-defenders' chances are "ordinarily quite good," since the burden of proof is on the state.

In such cases, he said, the court is careful to guard the defendant's rights.

But a skillful attorney, he said, can do things with evidence that a layman cannot.

So, while more and more people are trying on their own to get what is legally theirs, it often takes, ironically, a lawyer to do just that.

Corrections Dept. Seeks
New Site For Drug UnitBy BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Rebuffed by Crete area residents, the State Department of Correctional Services has resumed its hunt for a location for a prisoners' chemical dependency unit.

Corrections Director Joseph Vitek said the department is now looking at possible locations in Omaha and on existing state prison property in Lincoln.

Consideration, he said, is being given to starting an interim chemical dependency unit using comparatively inexpensive modular construction on state grounds at either of the Penal Complex sites in Lincoln.

In the meantime, he said prison officials are beginning to lay some of the groundwork for a treatment program by trying to motivate prisoners to want to kick their drug habits.

However, Vitek said a successful chemical dependency program cannot operate in the middle of a prison situation. Pressures from other prisoners can doom such ventures from the start, he said.

Until recently, state officials had hoped to buy a deserted Nike missile base near Crete to locate the chemical dependency unit. The Pentacostal Church had operated a drug treatment center there and offered it to the state for $75,000 after the church dropped its program.

However, Crete area residents united to oppose the state's plans, after a legislative maneuver sailed into law providing state funds for buying the site. They appeared to be disturbed as much by the fact that the Appropriations Committee had not given them a public hearing on the matter as they were about the prospects of having prisoners for neighbors.

To administration officials, the opposition seemed curious. Crete residents did not object to the Pentacostal drug rehabilitation program being nearby. One person opposing state plans said residents were not as concerned by the Pentacostal program because those drug abusers had had a religious experience.

Also it is unusual for communities to oppose location of state facilities within their midst, since they frequently boost local economies.

Plans called for roughly 80 nonviolent inmates to be assigned to the center and 13 correctional officers to guard them.

After meeting with Vitek and state senators, the Crete residents' fears about security were still very much alive.

So a bill, LB553, was introduced at Gov. J. James Exon's request telling correctional officials to look elsewhere. That bill passed Thursday on a 44-0 vote and provides that alternative sites must be reported to the Legislature and Exon before money is made available to start the project.

Vitek said he was "extremely" disappointed that plans for the missile site were dropped. "We'll be hard-pressed to find a more desirable site," he said.

He estimated it would cost $500,000 to duplicate the Crete base, and the state could have bought it for $75,000.

Aid Comes

Of Quake

Santiago, Chile (AP)—Emergency workers distributed blankets and food Sunday to hundreds of Chileans left homeless by a major earthquake that affected 17 of the country's 25 provinces.

The quake, which hit Saturday, was the largest in magnitude this year and was centered in the Pacific Ocean off the country's southern agricultural region, the U.S. Geological Survey said. It caused some property damage, but no deaths or serious injuries, officials said.

About 300 rural dwellings made of adobe were destroyed by the quake and electricity was being restored in Malleco province, 400 miles south of Santiago, where the quake hit hardest.

Telephone communications, cut off for a time on Saturday, were back to normal. In Angol, the capital of Malleco province, almost every window of the new five-story hospital was broken.

In Concepcion, Chile's third largest city, electrical service was interrupted for several hours and pieces of concrete fell off the outside of buildings.

Malleco has been hit by numerous earthquakes, including the 1960 disaster which killed 5,000 persons, left 500,000 homeless and caused $500 million in damage, according to official figures.

Laotians Told To Be Calm

Premier Concedes
Pathet Lao Top Dogs

Vientiane, Laos (AP) — The government on Sunday night appealed to the populace to remain calm, denied rumors there would be bloodshed in Vientiane and prohibited Laotian and foreign residents from leaving the country.

The orders were issued in a broadcast by the Laotian national radio.

The directives were given under the name of the mixed security forces, the security body of the coalition government of rightists, leftists and neutralists set up under the 1973 peace accord to keep peace in the capital.

They were aimed at forestalling rumors and fears that a violent transfer of power to the Communist-led Pathet Lao was imminent.

The rumors came after Premier Souvanna Phouma virtually conceded Sunday that the Pathet Lao have won the struggle for control of Laos. He said it is necessary to look at the facts and prepare to reach "an accord with history."

The radio urged people to obey government orders and blamed rumors that there would be bloodshed on "certain rightist groups" who were trying to panic the population.

It said the joint security forces in Vientiane, made up of Pathet Lao and former rightist troops, would ensure the security of the city. Although there has been an exodus of high ranking officials associated with rightist, pro-American groups, and Vietnamese and Chinese businessmen, the city has been calm.

Shops were shut Sunday, but most Laotians appeared unaffected and unconcerned. There has been no obvious change in the day to day life, only one demonstration Friday in which the U.S. Embassy was stoned by students.

Hotels and restaurants were open as usual. There were no Pathet Lao troops, who number more than 2,000 in the city, seen on the streets.

If the Pathet Lao win control of Laos, the country will be the third of the U.S.-backed countries of Indochina to come under Communist control in recent weeks. Cambodia surrendered April 17 and South Vietnam on April 30.

Souvanna Phouma's speech followed the resignation of four senior rightist cabinet ministers and the removal of three top rightist generals from their posts. This amounts to the collapse of the pro-American wing of the coalition government and leaves the Pathet Lao as the only cohesive political organization in the country.

In neighboring Cambodia, the official Khmer Rouge radio proclaimed the country's strong ties with China and thanked North Korea, Vietnam and Laos for their support in "defeating the U.S. imperialists."

China provided most of the weaponry for the insurgent army in its five-year war and also harbored the exile government of Prince Norodom Sihanouk. There were no thanks for the Soviet Union, which had a "caretaker" diplomatic mission to the old regime. Its embassy building in Phnom Penh was sacked by the victorious Khmer Rouge.

A radio broadcast from Saigon said the Viet Cong military command is making plans to reopen Tan Son Nhut airport, which was hit by rockets and shelling in the last days of the U.S. evacuation. Air force personnel and civilian technicians were urged to report to work at the airport all of this week to get it ready for use.

The airport has already been used by a small number of aircraft, most apparently flying between Saigon and Hanoi, but one pilot said he had to land blind because the control tower was not operating.

Associated Press Correspondent Matt Franjola, one of three AP newsmen who remained in South Vietnam after its surrender to the Viet Cong, reported from the Mekong Delta that farmers were preparing their fields for expected rains, commerce was booming and war-damaged homes being rebuilt.

Souvanna Phouma, a U.S.-backed neutralist who has long tried to balance the right-wing and Communist sides in Laos, told a gathering of high officials including King Sisavang Vathana that 20 years of upheavals "have clearly resulted in a new situation."

"We must stop the fighting. The war has reached an end," he said.

The announcement by the 73-year-old Souvanna amounts to his concession to his 63-year-old half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, who heads the Pathet Lao. The Paris-educated sons of a Lao prince have differed for much of their lives over the path that Laos should take. Both favored its independence from France after World War II, but Souvanna chose to work within the existing government for gradual change while Souphanouvong went to Hanoi to join Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh. He later founded the Pathet Lao.

A little more than a year ago, the aging brothers met after a 10-year separation, embraced and laid the foundation of the now unsuccessful third attempt to coalition government. Souphanouvong was named to head a powerful political council in the coalition.

Diplomats expect the Government of National Union to be continued, but the replacements for the rightists who resigned will be men of less stature and power.

There are about 1,000 Americans in Laos.

A State Department spokesman said Sunday there are no plans at present to evacuate them. "The situation doesn't appear to warrant it," he said. He added that the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane has been cautioning people to remain calm.

In other Indochina developments, the International Red Cross Committee announced in Geneva that the Khmer Rouge had forced the Red Cross delegation in Phnom Penh to abandon a dozen sick and wounded people in a Red Cross protection zone.

4 Arab Nations Take Steps To Arm Industry

Cairo (AP) — Four Arab states have taken the first major step toward establishing an arms industry, forming a joint authority with $1.04 billion in capital.

Egypt and the wealthy Persian Gulf states of Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates formed The Arab Authority for Military Industry with contributions of $260 million each.

The authority's headquarters will be in Cairo.

As an indication of the importance it attaches to the project, Egypt named its war minister, Lt. Gen. Abdel Ghany Gamasy, as its representative on a ministerial committee that will run the authority. Representatives of the other three countries were not announced.

The new group will be exempted from tax and currency control laws and safeguarded against nationalization, reports carried in Cairo newspapers said Sunday.

The announcement did not say so, but the arms plants are expected to be established in Egypt, which has a vast pool of trainable manpower. Production would be for Egypt's army and export to other Arab countries.

Forming the authority represented a major Arab attempt to capitalize on its growing oil wealth and build an arms industry to match Israel's.

The Jewish state manufactures up to 30 per cent of its own war material from small arms to missiles to a new jet fighter that was unveiled last month.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has long chafed under Egypt's almost total dependence on the Soviet Union for its military needs. Gamasy made a strong case for an Arabs arms industry several times last year when he was the Arab League's assistant secretary general for military affairs and presided over meetings of Arab chiefs of staff.

British and French arms sales officials and company representatives already have visited Egypt several times this year in connection with establishing an arms industry but no agreements have been reached.

Reports in the foreign press said the visit of Britain's Lord Stokes to Cairo earlier this year was related to establishing a Westland Lynx helicopter plant and an assembly line for Hawk jet trainer-fighters.

The French film Thomson-CSF, a specialist in radar and electronic gear including missiles, also sent representatives for talks. Sadat visited the Thomson-CSF offices during his visit to France in February when he concluded an agreement to purchase 44 Mirage jets.

A year ago Sadat said he planned to diversify his sources of arms, after the Soviet Union failed to make good on replacing equipment Egypt lost in the October 1973 war.

Sadat repeated complaints about Soviet arms deliveries in a May Day speech.

In his move to diversify, Sadat tacitly was supported by the United States and Saudi Arabia, both of whom are anxious to see Egypt remain free from strong Soviet influence.

It was the alliance that Sadat formed with Saudi Arabia in the summer of 1973 that made it possible for him to go to war a few months later.

To replace Egypt's aircraft losses in the war Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates began purchasing a squadron of the French-made Mirages.

As plans to develop an arms industry gathered steam, a top adviser to the Saudi royal family, Kamal Adham, began making frequent trips to Cairo, usually when British or French representatives were in town, for conferences with Sadat and Egypt's minister of war production, Lt. Gen. Ahmed Kamal el Badry.

The decision to go public with an announcement of a joint authority may indicate the Arabs are on the verge of concluding one of these agreements.

FIRST VICTORY... Guard fires a volley at Fort Ticonderoga, N.Y., scene of America's first victory in the Revolution.

Scene Of Capture Of Fort Being Cleaned Up

Ticonderoga, N.Y. (AP) — Clean-up crews worked Sunday to remove a mountain of litter that piled up during the reenactment of the capture of Fort Ticonderoga — the first American victory of the Revolutionary War.

But John H. G. Pell, 69, whose family owns the majestic fort overlooking the lake, was convinced the celebration was worth it.

This community of 5,500, previously known as the site of a foul-smelling International Paper Co. plant, will "always be a better place" because of the bicentennial preparations, Pell said. The paper company has built a new mill several miles away and a bicentennial park is being constructed on the site of the old "ugly-looking" mill, he said.

"I think a tremendous effort was made on the part of the whole community to make the town better-looking in every respect... The village is really becoming one of the most beautiful villages in the state," Pell added.

The bicentennial event was a little more elaborate than the raid by Ethan Allen's Green Mountain boys in 1775. This one involved a half-dozen public relations men, up to 200 reporters, photographers and television cameramen, nine press boats to accompany the descendants as they crossed the lake, and a documentary film crew recording every dramatic word and gesture.

Incongruous scenes abounded: Benedict Arnold arriving 20 minutes late for the first reenactment at 4 a.m. because he had been caught in a traffic jam, a filmmaker screaming, "Quiet please in the boat!" as the first craft filled with descendants — and pulled by a motorboat — came ashore from the Vermont side of the lake.

An estimated 40,000 spectators passed through the gates of the stone fort, built in 1755 and reconstructed early in this century, before the day was through.

Benedict Arnold, an American hero who turned traitor later in the war, was played by his descendant, Ronald Arnold, 31, a teacher and salesman from Kingston, Ont. The bicentennial organizers "asked me if I would and I'm an accommodating fellow. My father was too shy," the bespectacled, good-humored Canadian said.

Everywhere he went in his bright red uniform and ill-fitting boots, Ronald — who brought his 2-year-old son John Benedict Arnold — was asked the obvious question.

"Everybody and his dog keeps asking me how it feels to be a descendant of Benedict Arnold," Ronald said. "How do I know? I've never been descended from Benedict Arnold."

Repression Ending

Santiago, Chile — After 20 months in power, Chile's military junta shows signs of dismantling the vast apparatus of political repression created to "extirpate the Marxist cancer." According to government estimates more than 41,000 people — one of every 250 Chileans — have been detained at least temporarily for political reasons. Church sources who have concerned with political prisoners believe that the figure is closer to 95,000 one in every 100. Calls For Cooperation Heard By Oil Conference Delegates

Tokyo (AP) — The World Petroleum Conference opened here Sunday with repeated calls for cooperation between oil consumers and sellers and for stepped up oil conservation.

About 2,000 foreign delegates were on hand from nearly every major oil producing or consuming nation, except China. The six-day conference, which was last held in Moscow in 1971, is primarily a technical meeting of experts. No immediate major developments were expected.

Japan's Crown Prince Akihito welcomed the delegates at the opening ceremony. Then Prime Minister Takeo Miki told them, "Relationships of dialogue and cooperation between oil producing and consuming nations must, I believe, be established."

"Temporary setbacks should not cause the efforts of the oil producers and consumers to break down. We must continue to work for a fruitful dialogue," the prime minister added. Miki was referring to the talks last month in Paris which broke up over the agenda for later discussions.

The new U.S. secretary of commerce, Rogers C. B. Morton, told the conference that the United States does "not seek confrontation with the producer nations. We seek mutual accommodations among all nations. Our position is to achieve a world oil price that is fair and equitable to producer and consumer alike."

Turning to the conservation theme, Morton reminded the audience that, "The energy resources of this planet are finite. We will have to learn to better utilize the life-sustaining resources we have."

Moscow's petroleum minister, V.D. Shashin, said to the delegates that right now, "in the Soviet Union... the current national oil and gas supply situation is quite reassuring."

But he also admitted that, "however great are oil and gas resources on this planet... these invaluable gifts of nature will be needed by many future generations not only as energy fuel but also and increasingly as chemical raw material to produce vital consumer goods."

Food Studies Centered

New York (UPI) — A center for food studies has been established at the Columbia University Graduate School of Business here. Funds have been allocated for academic research, but the main activity this year consists of weekly seminars on world food problems.

Dr. Manoucher Eghbal, president of the National Iranian Oil Co., also spoke at the opening ceremonies. He asserted, "There must be no doubt about the need for a systematic and dedicated global petroleum conservation effort."

Eghbal restated the standard position of Iran, the world's No. 2 oil exporter, that vast amounts of energy are being wasted. He said petroleum is a particularly valuable resource which must be conserved for use as a raw material and in other applications where alternative energy sources are not possible.

Art Dealer Jon Streep Murdered In Apartment

New York (AP) — Internationally famous art dealer Jon Streep, reported here to buy pictures for the Shah or Iran, was stabbed 16 times early Sunday. He died just as police burst through the door of his apartment in the staidly fashionable Hyde Park Hotel.

Responding to complaints from neighbors about noise, police found a bloodied young man leaving the lobby about 3 a.m.

After Streep died, they booked the suspect, Harry Orloff, 23, of Troy, N.Y., on a charge of second-degree murder.

Orloff was wearing a leather coat but, police said, was shirtless and had blood on his chest.

Streep, 57, listed his next of kin as Norbert Streep of Amsterdam. He was described as a member of a wealthy family of Dutch diamond dealers.

He came here at the time of World War II, became a U.S. citizen, and became known as an early exponent and dealer in the works of Dutch abstractionist Piet Mondrian.

Streep never operated a gallery, but a Museum of Modern Art official said he was a "behind-the-scenes dealer in pictures for investment."

Streep returned to the United States from Europe seven weeks ago and had been living in his $900-a-month, three-room apartment in the hotel, in the center of Manhattan's Upper East Side art gallery district, since then.

4 Arab Nations Take Steps To Arm Industry

Cairo (AP) — Four Arab states have taken the first major step toward establishing an arms industry, forming a joint authority with $1.04 billion in capital.

Egypt and the wealthy Persian Gulf states of Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates formed The Arab Authority for Military Industry with contributions of $260 million each.

The authority's headquarters will be in Cairo.

As an indication of the importance it attaches to the project, Egypt named its war minister, Lt. Gen. Abdel Ghany Gamas, as its representative on a ministerial committee that will run the authority. Representatives of the other three countries were not announced.

The new group will be exempted from tax and currency control laws and safeguarded against nationalization, reports carried in Cairo newspapers said Sunday.

The announcement did not say so, but the arms plants are expected to be established in Egypt, which has a vast pool of trainable manpower. Production would be for Egypt's army and export to other Arab countries.

Forming the authority represented a major Arab attempt to capitalize on its growing oil wealth and build an arms industry to match Israel's.

The Jewish state manufactures up to 30 per cent of its own war material from small arms to missiles to a new jet fighter that was unveiled last month.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has long chafed under Egypt's almost total dependence on the Soviet Union for its military needs. Gamas made a strong case for an Arabs arms industry several times last year when he was the Arab League's assistant secretary general for military affairs and presided over meetings of Arab chiefs of staff.

British and French arms sales officials and company representatives already have visited Egypt several times this year in connection with establishing an arms industry but no agreements have been reached.

Reports in the foreign press said the visit of Britain's Lord Stokes to Cairo earlier this year was related to establishing a Westland Lynx helicopter plant and an assembly line for Hawk jet trainer-fighters.

The French firm Thomson-CSF, a specialist in radar and electronic gear including missiles, also sent representatives for talks. Sadat visited the Thomson-CSF offices during his visit to France in February when he concluded an agreement to purchase 44 Mirage jets.

A year ago Sadat said he planned to diversify his sources of arms, after the Soviet Union failed to make good on replacing equipment Egypt lost in the October 1973 war.

Sadat repeated complaints about Soviet arms deliveries in a May Day speech.

In his move to diversify, Sadat tacitly was supported by the United States and Saudi Arabia, both of whom are anxious to see Egypt remain free from strong Soviet influence.

It was the alliance that Sadat formed with Saudi Arabia in the summer of 1973 that made it possible for him to go to war a few months later.

To replace Egypt's aircraft losses in the war Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates began purchasing a squadron of the French-made Mirages.

As plans to develop an arms industry gathered steam, a top adviser to the Saudi royal family, Kamal Adham, began making frequent trips to Cairo, usually when British or French representatives were in town, for conferences with Sadat and Egypt's minister of war production, Lt. Gen. Ahmed Kamal el Badry.

The decision to go public with an announcement of a joint authority may indicate the Arabs are on the verge of concluding one of these agreements.

Israel Signs Treaty

Brussels — A preferential trade treaty between members of the European Common Market and Israel was signed in Brussels despite a last minute demand by Arab nations that the signing be delayed until similar treaties could be signed between the Common Market countries and Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia.

Repression Ending

Santiago, Chile — After 20 months in power, Chile's military junta shows signs of dismantling the vast apparatus of political repression created to "extirpate the Marxist cancer." According to government estimates more than 41,000 people — one of every 250 Chileans — have been detained at least temporarily for political reasons. Church sources who have concerned with political prisoners believe that the figure is closer to 95,000 one in every 100. Both the government and its domestic critics seem to agree that there are still 5,000 people in prison camps for political reasons.

That federal assistance to the City of New York would not be appropriate."

New York — About 50,000 people, including many veterans of 10 years of antiwar marches and rallies, filled the Sheep Meadow in Central Park to celebrate the end of the war in South Vietnam and Cambodia. The event was organized by a coalition of antiwar groups.

FIRST VICTORY . . . Guard fires a volley at Fort Ticonderoga, N.Y., scene of America's first victory in the Revolution.

Scene Of Capture Of Fort Being Cleaned Up

Ticonderoga, N.Y. (AP) — Clean-up crews worked Sunday to remove a mountain of litter that piled up during the reenactment of the capture of Fort Ticonderoga — the first American victory of the Revolutionary War.

But John H. G. Pell, 69, whose family owns the majestic fort overlooking the lake, was convinced the celebration was worth it.

This community of 5,500, previously known as the site of a foul-smelling International Paper Co. plant, will "always be a better place" because of the bicentennial preparations, Pell said. The paper company has built a new mill several miles away and a bicentennial park is being constructed on the site of the old "ugly-looking" mill, he said.

"I think a tremendous effort was made on the part of the whole community to make the town better-looking in every respect . . . The village is really becoming one of the most beautiful villages in the state," Pell added.

The bicentennial event was a little more elaborate than the raid by Ethan Allen's Green Mountain boys in 1775. This one involved a half-dozen public relations men, up to 200 reporters, photographers and television cameramen, nine press boats to accompany the descendants as they crossed the lake, and a documentary film crew recording every dramatic word and gesture.

Incongruous scenes abounded: Benedict Arnold arriving 20 minutes late for the first reenactment at 4 a.m. because he had been caught in a traffic jam; a filmmaker screaming, "Quiet please in the boat!" as the first craft filled with descendants — and pulled by a motorboat — came ashore from the Vermont side of the lake.

An estimated 40,000 spectators passed through the gates of the stone fort, built in 1755 and reconstructed early in this century, before the day was through.

Benedict Arnold, an American hero who turned traitor later in the war, was played by his descendant, Ronald Arnold, 31, a teacher and salesman from Kingston, Ont. The bicentennial organizers "asked me if I would and I'm an accommodating fellow. My father was too shy," the bespectacled, good-humored Canadian said.

Everywhere he went in his bright red uniform and ill-fitting boots, Ronald — who brought his 2-year-old son John Benedict Arnold — was asked the obvious question.

"Everybody and his dog keeps asking me how it feels to be a descendant of Benedict Arnold," Ronald said. "How do I know? I've never not been descended from Benedict Arnold."

Spooks In An Open Society

High On Speed?

Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha wants to make scofflaws out of us — or so it seems.

Chambers last week successfully attached to a bill an amendment which would lessen the penalty for speeding on the Interstate.

The bill, LB381, extends the 55 m.p.h. speed limit to the summer of 1976. Chamber's amendment limits the fine for driving up to 65 miles an hour on an interstate highway to $10, prohibits judges from assessing court costs and prohibits the loss of points for such a violation under Nebraska's 12-point driver's license revocation system.

We're not crazy about the 55 m.p.h. speed limit. Out here in the plains where distance between points on the map really adds up it takes quite awhile to get from here to there. People out here drive more miles in the course of their daily lives than do folks who live in more densely-populated, urban areas. So at least there is a case for having a reasonably safe speed limit and 65 m.p.h. is reasonably safe for Interstate travel.

But aside from safety, the main reason for a lowered speed limit nationally was fuel conservation. Now that we're apparently swimming in gasoline again, is everybody going to forget about fuel conservation? Probably they are — until the next oil embargo or until the time the wells go dry.

There seems to be a justification for a lower speed limit in the sense that we do save lives and some fuel. By making it easier to break the law and get away with it for only a ten-spot, several principles are damaged.

We hate to get stuffy about it, but they are: respect for law, which deteriorates when it becomes easy to do something the law says you can't do; the conservation ethic, which we ignore at our own peril and the clearly enunciated principle that the federal government will rap our knuckles if we try to pass laws which are designed to avoid federal requirements or we don't pass laws which the federal government wants.

There are a great many laws which are a pain in the neck to observe. We suppose they are on the books for a reason. But for the sake of the concept of law in general we would rather see such laws stricken from the statute books than detoched. When a law can be broken with impunity, it will be.

Proper Focus On CIA

CIA Director William Colby is drumming up public support for the Central Intelligence Agency's right to become involved in clandestine international affairs if the need arises.

The CIA's rather murky role is undergoing intense scrutiny in Congress and elsewhere presently and all sorts of recommendations may be forming which would seek to limit the agency's scope of operation. Colby can hardly be blamed for wanting to mount his public relations campaign a jump or two ahead of the critic's proposals.

There are a couple of important points which need to be remembered:

One, most people in this country do not want America's intelligence apparatus emasculated. Americans might not approve of the CIA plotting the assassination of foreign leaders, but they realize the need for undercover operations abroad. It would be foolish and naive to put straitjacket restrictions on the intelligence community.

Two, some people are getting far afield of the original reasons for looking into CIA activity. CIA involvement in the military coup that toppled Salvador Allende in Chile was one reason, but the overriding reason was CIA involvement in domestic politics.

That is what needs to be guarded against. There is some indication that the Rockefeller Committee will report evidence that the White House during several administrations was responsible for domestic spying by the CIA.

The spotlight should focus on that kind of activity. Americans don't want a president who is so insecure or who craves power so much that he uses the powerful resources at hand to spy on and intimidate the people. But they do want an intelligence community that can let their government know what is going on in the world and can help the government influence what is going on.

PARIS — The Central Intelligence Agency has been so traduced in recent months and so unfairly given the public image of an American equivalent of the Soviet secret security apparatus with its enormous political power in Russia and its own private military organization that I would like to tell the following story.

Prof. Stevan Dedijer of the University of Lund, Sweden, recently made an experiment in connection with his course on "Social Intelligence." According to him: "I mailed a letter to 10 foreign intelligence organizations in 10 countries. I asked in the letter for all the available information about the history, goals, structures, personnel composition, recruitment, and outstanding problems" (of each organization).

From CIA in Washington I received about 15 items of literature weighing one kilogram, including a bibliography of books about the CIA. From the others, as of today, I have received nothing. And when I told a high Yugoslav government official of my letter to the Yugoslav CIA" (equivalent) "he told me: 'You are totally demented.'"

Dedijer is an expert in the field, having personally worked at various periods (by his own admission) with Soviet, United States and Yugoslav intelligence. Born a Yugoslav, he graduated from Princeton, was an American paratrooper during World War II, returned to Belgrade, headed Tito's Atomic Energy Agency, and finally, disappointed with communism, left for Sweden. He is now a Swedish citizen.

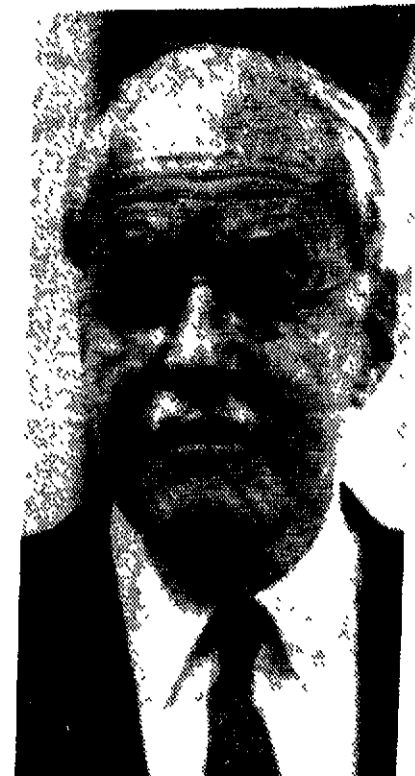

In a draft study prepared for a colloquium held at Dartmouth College, scrutinizing the relationship of governmental intelligence services to society, Dedijer referred to "the recently acquired right of citizens of the U.S.A. to write to the CIA and ask for filed it has on each of them."

He cited a 1970 report of the Defense Science Board of the United States which concluded: "More might be gained than lost if our nation were to adopt — unilaterally, if necessary — a policy of complete openness in all the areas of information relevant to the task force" which issued the Defense Science Board's study.

This urged: "Open society should recognize that openness is one of its strongest weapons, for it accelerates mutual understanding and reduces barriers to rapid development." Dedijer calls such an open society "social transparency" and adds that its significance "can best be appreciated in the light of the almost total absence of such an attitude as expressed in public documents in all the other countries I know of."

Indeed, he estimates that about 90% of the literature on intelligence has been produced in America. "If we ... concentrate on the present national domestic and foreign intelligence, on organizational intelligence, business intelligence, etc., then close to 100% of the literature is produced in the U.S.A."

"As regards 'the transparency of social intelligence,' the U.S.A. has an incomparable lead not only in relation to the communist countries but also in relation to the most open of democracies."

ALLEN DULLES
... wrote a CIA book ...

Dedijer considers secrecy "a key form of human behavior, man is the secret animal." But he thinks changing values "now reaching a fire storm force" have stimulated "the questioning of national security doctrines and systems of beliefs."

One result of the "fire storm" experienced by Americans has been the disclosure of masses of information concerning intelligence. The CIA had already permitted many books about its operations (even by a former director, Allen Dulles) to be issued without objection. Generally it only contests disclosures that might jeopardize lives or sources considered vital to national security.

It is difficult to imagine remotely comparable tolerance by any foreign intelligence agency. Until the 1960's the British obscured even the name of their intelligence chief. As for the Soviet Union: Everything from weather forecasts to gold reserves is held secret. No Russian would dream of openly questioning MVD techniques.

Nevertheless, Dedijer is optimistic that worldwide changes may be in the making. Exchanges of information about climate, ecology or outer space are inspiring new cultural ethics and a growing belief that "what is good for the world has to be good for my nation."

The professor concludes that: "The development of such a global intelligence system will be the result of the first major breakthrough in the rise of global ethics." This is a cheering thought although the road is long. Meanwhile, Americans should realize they are miles ahead of any other nation along that road — not just as a nation but specifically in terms of the functioning of the CIA.

"Some Of Them Must Wish We Had Stayed Away From THEIR Towns"

JACK ANDERSON

Nixon's For Connally

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon's private presidential preference, according to friends, who have talked politics with him at San Clemente, is Big John Connally.

This doesn't mean the former President would endorse Connally for the Republican nomination in 1976. On the contrary, Nixon more likely would support the man he put in the White House, Gerald Ford.

At private political bull sessions, Nixon has praised both Ford and Connally. But it is Connally whom the ex-President singles out as best qualified to run the nation.

Nixon is pleased over Connally's acquittal in a bribery case and apparently feels this frees the former Treasury secretary to run for president.

But the acquittal was a bit less than complete exoneration. Jury foreman Dennis O'Toole was quoted as saying after the trial: "Our verdict meant not that we had found necessarily that John Connally was innocent, but rather not guilty based on the case presented to us."

The fact that Nixon is discussing current events with old friends is itself newsworthy. It means the former President has snapped out of his deep melancholy.

He is contrite about his Watergate mistakes and concerned about what the American people think of him, according to friends. He desperately hopes he can regain enough stature so that he will be permitted "to make a contribution to the country." It isn't public office but an advisory role that he would like, say his friends.

Because of his experience in foreign affairs, he believes he could offer some useful suggestions on foreign policy. He has reminded visitors that he and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger "made a good team." They reduced tensions in the world and at least prolonged the peace in the Middle East, Nixon contends.

He is dismayed over the collapse of the anti-communist governments in Cambodia and South Vietnam. He suggests that the failure of Congress to back up the Saigon regime with military aid precipitated the crisis.

But to close friends, Richard Nixon's views are less important than the fact that he is beginning to emerge at last from his shell.

The Watergate prosecutors, after exhausting every lead, have given up hope of getting any indictments in the celebrated case of the 18-and-one-half-minute gap.

This was the mysterious break in the June 20, 1972, tape of President Nixon's White House conversations. Subpoenaed papers showed that Nixon had discussed the Watergate break-in with his most trusted aide, H.R. Haldeman.

But at precisely the point that the subject of Watergate came up, the conversation abruptly broke off, and the tape emitted a mysterious hum for 18 and one half minutes.

A team of experts appointed by Judge John Sirica found that the missing section was not caused by a malfunction but by human hands. This left the big question of whose human hands.

We have learned that the special prosecutors have narrowed the suspects down to four persons: Rose Mary Woods, the former president's loyal, long-time secretary; Nixon aide Steve Bull; White House lawyer Fred Buzhardt; and Richard Nixon himself.

There is also a fifth, less likely possibility that the Sirica experts were wrong and that the buzzing gap was caused by the famous Uher 5000 recorder itself.

Plaudits For Stuart

On Saturday evening, May 3, we were privileged to be among the more than 1,000 people who attended the two-hour-long program, "Songs of the Seasons," at Stuart, Nebraska. This was the third performance of the show within a week. It is sponsored annually by the Stuart American Legion and Auxiliary.

The cast for the show was made up entirely of the citizens of the Stuart community, both town and country people giving of their time and talent. This was the 14th season that the community of Stuart has produced a show, and it was spectacular.

We couldn't help but marvel at all the talent in this small but very active community in the ranch country of Nebraska. Rehearsals for the show commenced in January, so much time was involved in getting the show on the road.

One rancher lives 25 miles from Stuart and he drove in to rehearsal each week. One senior played in the orchestra for accompaniment. The seniors had gone to Iowa on Friday for "Sneak Day" and this boy drove back to Stuart on Saturday so he could fulfill his obligation to be in the show that evening. The others weren't returning until Sunday. And one of the men on the program was the largest hog rancher in Nebraska. What cooperation and loyalty in the community!

Good intentions do not build prisons. You know, I am convinced that all the major characters in the current struggle over opposing prison construction proposals have the best of intentions.

Not everyone shares that view. But I think the senators most closely involved in the maneuvering which changed the prison plan want action this year.

Both Governor Exon and Senator Luedtke, whose earlier agreement was shattered by the new proposal, have already proved their desire for swift action.

The governor put money where his mouth was — in his budget recommendations. Luedtke has struggled for three years now to gain financing for a facility to replace the Men's Reformatory. His commitment to prison reform is absolute.

But disagreement on prison size is liable to scuttle the whole proposition again this year. And that would be more than a shame, it would be inexcusable.

We've all heard the old story about parishoners agreeing on the need for a new church, but never building it because of disagreement on the site.

This battle over size is somewhat similar. It is not a question of one big prison versus two small prisons. It is a difference between one small prison and two smaller prisons.

The question which all the participants ought to consider is whether no new prison at all is better than the other guy's plan.

If 30 senators will agree to stick with the new plan, which the governor opposes, it can be enacted over his veto. If they don't, it will fail.

Now, while I may be convinced that the major participants in this struggle all enter the battle with good intentions, I cannot be convinced that all those senators who voted to revise the original proposal share the same qualities.

During the voting on the floor, one shouted: "Let's adopt the amendment and kill the bill."

How many more are ready to abandon the new plan now that they have helped scuttle the old one?

Which plan is best? I don't know the answer to that question. But I am fairly certain that either plan is better than none at all.

It may not be easy to salvage a prison plan this session. But senators have an obligation to do so — even if they must stay beyond their 90th day to do it.

Oh, my, they say. We can't do that. No, senators. It's not that you can't. It's that you won't.

An arbitrary deadline should not stand in the path of the Legislature's clear duty to finish its work before it goes home.

Prison construction is a piece of unfinished business which is a little more important than holiday plans.

And there are other items which fit that description, too. Time is running out for all of them.

Hopefully, they can be completed by May 23 or May 24 and everyone can go home.

Sometimes you get the impression that the merger of interests between Omaha and Lincoln which was supposed to occur with the confederation of the University of Nebraska and the University of Omaha didn't take.

Listening to legislative debate last week, as Omaha senators jockeyed for position for their campus, and Lincoln senators tried to protect theirs, the atmosphere seemed to suggest a rivalry, more than a partnership.

There were those who thought that the confederation would unite Lincoln and Omaha senators behind the University of Nebraska and its three (Medical Center, too) campuses.

But the result has been more one of competition, than cooperation.

One group of senators believe their campus is treated like a poor relative. The other group exhibits concern that their campus is now sharing resources which it might have had on its own to improve at a more rapid pace.

There may be some examples of cooperative effort, but the relationship is not exactly trusting.

Spooks In An Open Society

High On Speed?

Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha wants to make scofflaws out of us — or so it seems.

Chambers last week successfully attached to a bill an amendment which would lessen the penalty for speeding on the Interstate.

The bill, LB381, extends the 55 m.p.h. speed limit to the summer of 1976. Chamber's amendment limits the fine for driving up to 65 miles an hour on an interstate highway to $10, prohibits judges from assessing court costs and prohibits the loss of points for such a violation under Nebraska's 12-point driver's license revocation system.

We're not crazy about the 55 m.p.h. speed limit. Out here in the plains where distance between points on the map really adds up it takes quite awhile to get from here to there. People out here drive more miles in the course of their daily lives than do folks who live in more densely-populated, urban areas. So at least there is a case for having a reasonably safe speed limit and 65 m.p.h. is reasonably safe for Interstate travel.

But aside from safety, the main reason for a lowered speed limit nationally was fuel conservation. Now that we're apparently swimming in gasoline again, is everybody going to forget about fuel conservation? Probably they are — until the next oil embargo or until the time the wells go dry.

There seems to be a justification for a lower speed limit in the sense that we do save lives and some fuel. By making it easier to break the law and get away with it for only a ten-spot, several principles are damaged.

We hate to get stuffy about it, but they are: respect for law, which deteriorates when it becomes easy to do something the law says you can't do; the conservation ethic, which we ignore at our own peril and the clearly enunciated principle that the federal government will rap our knuckles if we try to pass laws which are designed to avoid federal requirements or we don't pass laws which the federal government wants.

There are a great many laws which are a pain in the neck to observe. We suppose they are on the books for a reason. But for the sake of the concept of law in general we would rather see such laws stricken from the statute books than detoathed. When a law can be broken with impunity, it will be.

Proper Focus On CIA

CIA Director William Colby is drumming up public support for the Central Intelligence Agency's right to become involved in clandestine international affairs if the need arises.

The CIA's rather murky role is undergoing intense scrutiny in Congress and elsewhere presently and all sorts of recommendations may be forming which would seek to limit the agency's scope of operation. Colby can hardly be blamed for wanting to mount his public relations campaign a jump or two ahead of the critic's proposals.

There are a couple of important points which need to be remembered:

One, most people in this country do not want America's intelligence apparatus emasculated. Americans might not approve of the CIA plotting the assassination of foreign leaders, but they realize the need for undercover operations abroad. It would be foolish and naive to put straitjacket restrictions on the intelligence community.

Two, some people are getting far afield of the original reasons for looking into CIA activity CIA involvement in the military coup that toppled Salvador Allende in Chile was one reason, but the overriding reason was CIA involvement in domestic politics.

That is what needs to be guarded against. There is some indication that the Rockefeller Committee will report evidence that the White House during several administrations was responsible for domestic spying by the CIA.

The spotlight should focus on that kind of activity. Americans don't want a president who is so insecure or who craves power so much that he uses the powerful resources at hand to spy on and intimidate the people. But they do want an intelligence community that can let their government know what is going on in the world and can help the government influence what is going on.

PARIS — The Central Intelligence Agency has been so traduced in recent months and so unfairly given the public image of an American equivalent of the Soviet secret security apparatus with its enormous political power in Russia and its own private military organization that I would like to tell the following story.

Prof. Stevan Dedijer of the University of Lund, Sweden, recently made an experiment in connection with his course on "Social Intelligence." According to him: "I mailed a letter to 10 foreign intelligence organizations in 10 countries. I asked in the letter for all the available information about the history, goals, structures, personnel composition, recruitment, and outstanding problems" (of each organization).

From CIA in Washington I received about 15 items of literature weighing one kilogram, including a bibliography of books about the CIA. From the others, as of today, I have received nothing. And when I told a high Yugoslav government official of my letter to the Yugoslav CIA" (equivalent) "he told me: 'You are totally demoted.'"

Dedijer is an expert in the field, having personally worked at various periods (by his own admission) with Soviet, United States and Yugoslav intelligence. Born a Yugoslav, he graduated from Princeton, was an American paratrooper during World War II, returned to Belgrade, headed Tito's Atomic Energy Agency, and finally, disappointed with communism, left for Sweden. He is now a Swedish citizen.

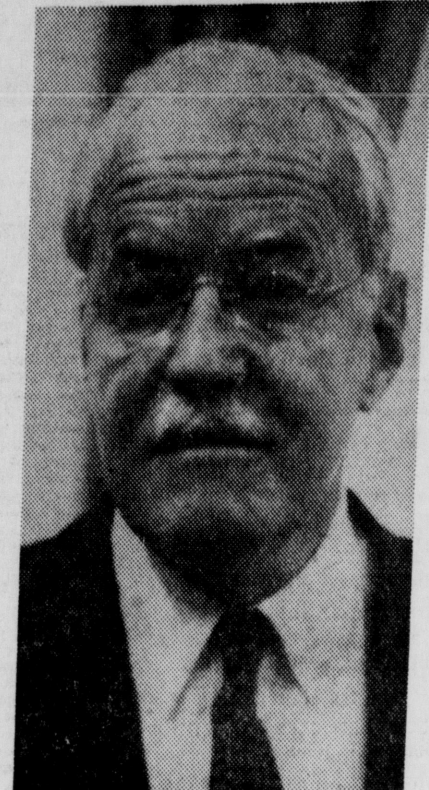

In a draft study prepared for a colloquium held at Dartmouth College, scrutinizing the relationship of governmental intelligence services to society, Dedijer referred to "the recently acquired right of citizens of the U.S.A. to write to the CIA and ask for filed it has on each of them."

He cited a 1970 report of the Defense Science Board of the United States which concluded: "More might be gained than lost if our nation were to adopt — unilaterally, if necessary — a policy of complete openness in all the areas of information relevant to the task force" which issued the Defense Science Board's study.

This urged: "Open society should recognize that openness is one of its strongest weapons, for it accelerates mutual understanding and reduces barriers to rapid development." Dedijer calls such an open society "social transparency" and adds that its significance "can best be appreciated in the light of the almost total absence of such an attitude as expressed in public documents in all the other countries I know of."

Indeed, he estimates that about 90% of the literature on intelligence has been produced in America. "If we... concentrate on the present national domestic and foreign intelligence, on organizational intelligence, business intelligence, etc., then close to 100% of the literature is produced in the U.S.A."

"As regards 'the transparency of social intelligence,' the U.S.A. has an incomparable lead not only in relation to the communist countries but also in relation to the most open of democracies."

ALLEN DULLES
... wrote a CIA book ...

Dedijer considers secrecy "a key form of human behavior; man is the secret animal." But he thinks changing values "now reaching a fire storm force" have stimulated "the questioning of national security doctrines and systems of beliefs."

One result of the "fire storm" experienced by Americans has been the disclosure of masses of information concerning intelligence. The CIA had already permitted many books about its operations (even by a former director, Allen Dulles) to be issued without objection. Generally it only contests disclosures that might jeopardize lives or sources considered vital to national security.

It is difficult to imagine remotely comparable tolerance by any foreign intelligence agency. Until the 1960's the British obscured even the name of their intelligence chief. As for the Soviet Union: Everything from weather forecasts to gold reserves is held secret. No Russian would dream of openly questioning MVD techniques.

Nevertheless, Dedijer is optimistic that worldwide changes may be in the making. Exchanges of information about climate, ecology or outer space are inspiring new cultural ethics and a growing belief that "what is good for the world has to be good for my nation."

The professor concludes that: "The development of such a global intelligence system will be the result of the first major breakthrough in the rise of global ethics." This is a cheering thought although the road is long. Meanwhile, Americans should realize they are miles ahead of any other nation along that road — not just as a nation but specifically in terms of the functioning of the CIA.

Nixon's For Connally

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon's private presidential preference, according to friends who have talked politics with him at San Clemente, is Big John Connally.

This doesn't mean the former President would endorse Connally for the Republican nomination in 1976. On the contrary, Nixon more likely would support the man he put in the White House, Gerald Ford.

At private political bull sessions, Nixon has praised both Ford and Connally. But it is Connally whom the ex-President singles out as best qualified to run the nation.

Nixon is pleased over Connally's acquittal in a bribery case and apparently feels this frees the former Treasury secretary to run for President.

But the acquittal was a bit less than complete exoneration. Jury foreman Dennis O'Toole was quoted as saying after the trial: "Our verdict meant not that we had found necessarily that John Connally was innocent, but rather not guilty based on the case presented to us."

The fact that Nixon is discussing current events with old friends is itself newsworthy. It means the former President has snapped out of his deep melancholy.

He is contrite about his Watergate mistakes and concerned about what the American people think of him, according to friends. He desperately hopes he can regain enough stature so that he will be permitted "to make a contribution to the country." It isn't public office but an advisory role that he would like, say his friends.

Because of his experience in foreign affairs, he believes he could offer some useful suggestions on foreign policy. dictments in the celebrated case of the 18-and-one-half-minute gap.

But at precisely the point that the subject of Watergate came up, the conversation abruptly broke off, and the tape emitted a mysterious hum for 18 and one half minutes.

A team of experts appointed by Judge John Sirica found that the missing section was not caused by a malfunction but by human hands. This left the big question of whose human hands.

We have learned that the special prosecutors have narrowed the suspects down to four persons: Rose Mary Woods, the former president's loyal, long-time secretary; Nixon aide Steve Bull; White House lawyer Fred Buzhardt, and Richard Nixon himself.

Farm Pond Early Conservation Answer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of Monday morning articles dealing with erosion control.)

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Water is vital to humans, animals and plants, but like fire, too much of it in the wrong place is very unwelcome.

A parade of floods and droughts that endangered the lives and income of early settlers encouraged them to seek ways to even out the water supply and prevent soil losses.

The humble farm pond is one of the primary tools available to aid in the conservation of water, soil, wildlife. It also provides recreation and improves the quality of water in Nebraska.

11,000 Acres Irrigated
Nearly 11,000 acres of land

were irrigated from farm ponds in Gage County alone during last year's drought, according to Ron Fleece, manager of the Lower Blue Natural Resource District.

Bill Patterson, assistant state conservationist for water resources points out that wild ducks nest in some farm ponds while others are used by wild fowl as they migrate across the state.

"Virtually all farm ponds are stocked with fish providing a lot of recreation. I saw a picture of a seven-pound bass this week that was taken from a farm pond near Aurora," Patterson said.

Fish Stocking Issue

Patterson said that there were no statistics on how much recreation comes from farm ponds, but noted that Game Commission officials had testified against legislation proposing that fish stocking be limited to those ponds that were open to the general public.

"Most farmers do some fishing or their family does and they let friends and relatives fish there. I would venture to say that five out of 10 farmers will let a stranger fish if you ask. You might get a lecture on the virtues of closing a gate and be told to pick up your beer cans, but they will usually let you fish," he said.

Farm ponds collect excess rain water, reducing the potential for flooding downstream and provide water for livestock, but there are other conservation methods that conserve both water and the soil it carries away during heavy rains.

Terraces, grassed waterways, minimum tillage, and strip cropping are all tools in the fight to keep soil where it is and water where it falls on the land.

Gullies Halted

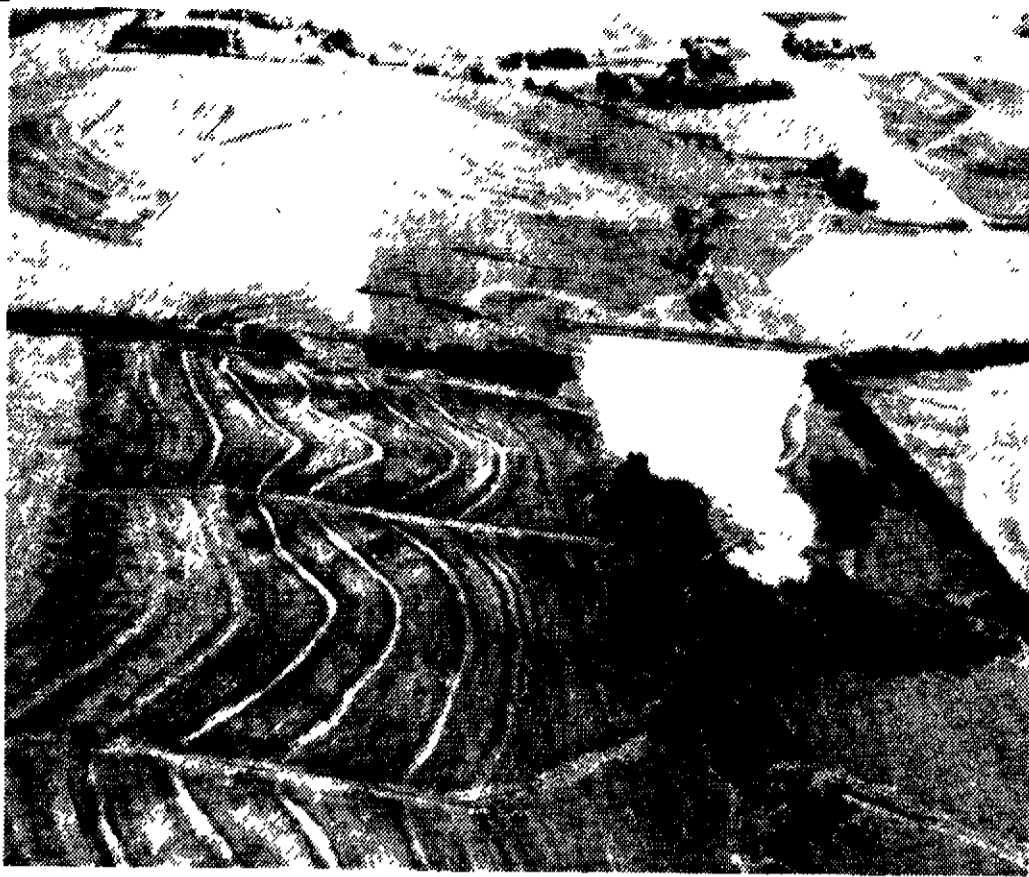

Gullies that once deepened with every rain have been halted by dams with a pipe to allow the water to collect during rains and then trickle out slowly.

In addition to conserving water, these same efforts reduce soil loss, prevent gullies, silting of lakes and ponds and reduce the amount of pollutants in creeks and rivers.

The effort may actually have improved some streams to a point where water is now of better quality than it was before Nebraska was settled, but we still have a long way to go.

"When we had 10 million buffalo wallowing in the Platte it wasn't very clean, but we also have some streams that are somewhat like graveyards," Patterson said.

Patterson said the soil in the streams comes from sheet erosion on land that farmers feel is so level that it doesn't need terracing. The soil also comes

'Can't Stop It All

"You can never stop all the soil movement, but you can greatly reduce it. This is really what our conservation programs are about. Sediment or fine soil is still our worst pollutant," he said.

Stopping the soil makes fields easier to farm, holds fertility where it will produce crops and keeps fertilizer and pesticides out of streams because they travel along with the soil particles carried by flood waters.

Planting of 30,000 to 40,000 trees and shrubs a year are also a part of the soil and water conservation programs. The roots of these plants hold soil in place. A habitat for all sorts of wild life and even shade for cattle on pasture is provided.

Another side of water conservation is more efficient use of irrigation water by building pits to collect surplus irrigation water and put it back on the land instead of allowing it to run down to the creek.

Gated Pipe Systems

New automated gated pipe irrigation systems are doing a better job of irrigating with less water than old methods, according to Bill Reinsch, an agronomist with the Soil Conservation Service.

"A bigger problem than unused tail water is excessive water use on one end of the irrigation run and not enough water on the opposite end of the row." This allows too much water to get underground carrying along nitrogen, which creates problems we just can't solve, he said.

"Farmers have got to learn how to do a better job of irrigating using less water," he said.

The only tools the Soil Conservation Service has to make farmers do a better job of conserving water and soil is education efforts and cost sharing programs operated by the SCS and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"A farmer can't afford a $40,000 flood retention structure alone, but will build one with some help in covering the cost. We have come a long way in reducing flood and silt damage in 40 years of soil conservation work, but the job is far from done," Patterson said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Don't be surprised to see another movement to strengthen the position of the vice chancellor for the Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska.

A lot of unhappy agriculture leaders are saying that vice chancellor Dr. Duane Acker is leaving for a post at Kansas State University that is identical to what the ag leaders want to create at NU.

They still feel that the Legislature, the main power structure at the University administration level and the Regents haven't given agriculture a fair shake.

Acker won the hearts and minds of farmers. They really liked the slender little professor who traveled into ever nook and cranny of the state to meet them and to learn what they expected of the university.

They like Acker well enough to be pleased to see him promoted in spite of what they regard as a serious loss to the rural portions of the state.

The leaders are particularly angry about the distribution of the equipment budget, which was withheld from the institute, causing the loss of some experiments and delaying vitally needed replacements of equipment that had broken down.

Acker himself described the equipment problem as "a thorn that submitted me to more pressure than I care to be submitted to."

When a farmer or a university scientist working on a farm experiment suffers an equipment breakdown he needs it now, not when some bureaucratic decision will supply it to him weeks or months too late to save the crop or experiment.

Now that spring is finally here so are the ticks on you and your pets. These ticks can carry Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

The only places that haven't reported the disease in the last 10 years are Alaska, Hawaii, Wisconsin, Maine and Vermont. The six states reporting the highest number of cases are nowhere near the Rocky Mountains.

Pets are usually infested with ticks they pick up in the yard. If your pet is allowed in the house the ticks can come in as well.

For your pet's health and your own you should visit your veterinarian to get some kind of tick killer that won't hurt the pet. You might want to go so far as to spray your yard as well. Ticks are dangerous at worst and unhealthy for your pet at best.

The drive to get farmers to cut back on crop production is running into the very snag Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz predicted it would, but there will be a reduction from the all-out production he wants.

The production cutback will come about because a lot of dryland farmers are learning that disaster payments are tied to their old allotment program. They won't overplant those allotments because they can't take the risk of losing two crops in a row.

Fertilizer prices are so darn high that many are holding down production by using less fertilizer than before, certainly less than they would use if it was cheaper.

Some farmers in Nebraska are allowing land to go fallow this spring and will plant winter wheat later this summer for harvest in 1976.

Add in the late start in planting due to the cold wet spring and the slightly lower germination of seed corn and you can see Butz's crop predictions are a bit high.

The USDA is tightening up federal regulations on shipping cattle in an effort to end brucellosis, also known as Bang's disease.

Cattle found exposed to brucellosis must be heat-branded on the left jaw with the letter S before they are shipped to slaughter or to be fattened in a quarantined feedlot.

The rules also require breeding cattle to be tested for brucellosis when they are moved between states from areas or herds that lack certified brucellosis-free designation.

The disease causes cattle to abort their young, reduces milk and meat production and turns up in humans as undulant fever. Getting rid of the disease, of course, would be good for everyone.

There is some hope that the gardeners who are trying to cut their food bill will gain some insight in the problems of farmers.

Hail will get some gardens this year, but bugs, dry weather, plant diseases, the neighbors kids and pets (corresponding to cattle raiding the corn fields) shortages of canning equipment and just plain dumb mistakes will all be a part of the experience.

Farmers have that kind of a year every year. Even the problem of crop surpluses you can palm off on neighbors may be a part of the scene.

Welcome to the farming game. Like gambling, its fun when you win.

Union Pacific Announces Wyoming Rail Upgrading

Omaha (UPI) — The Union Pacific Railroad plans to invest about $7.3 million to upgrade its rail facilities in Wyoming.

John Kenefick, UP president, said the railroad now has the capability of handling "10 times as much coal out of Wyoming as we are now handling and we are adding to that capacity."

Kenefick said the railroad will add $4.3 million in new centralized traffic control equipment to its Wyoming lines between Hanna and Rawlins. The railroad, he said, will also invest another $3 million to re-lay 25 miles of track in the state. Kenefick noted the UP now serves six major southern Wyoming coal mines.

"Critics who question the capacity of railroads to handle vastly expanded coal shipments out of Wyoming simply do not understand the mechanics of railroad operations," Kenefick said. "We can handle all the coal that could be mined in the foreseeable future in southern Wyoming under the most optimistic forecasts."

Beefalo Sale At Atkinson Expected To Draw 3,000

Atkinson (AP)—About 3,000 persons, including buyers from 11 states, are expected May 18 and 19 for two days of activities centered around a beefalo sale.

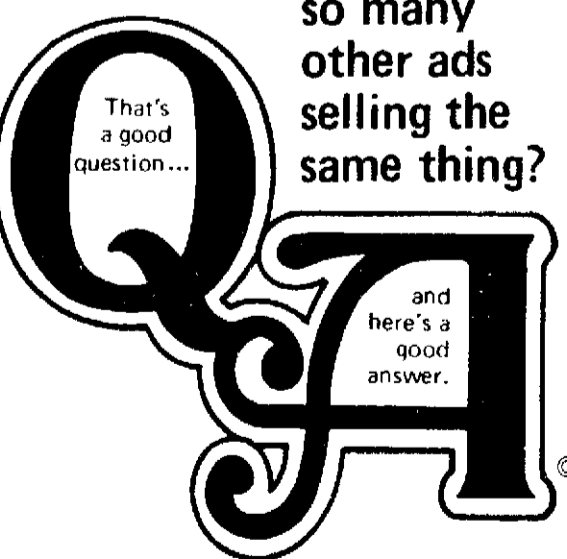

Beefalo are a cross between domestic cattle and buffalo. The sale bill calls the animals the first All-American breed.

Activities will begin at 1 p. m. May 18 with a beefalo display at the Atkinson Auction Market.

Other events that day will include a country western band for dancing, a demonstration and program concerning freeze branding, and a beefalo barbecue.

May 19th is reserved for the auction of a herd of 200 to 300 beefalo.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Talk of the interesting possibility that Russia might come back to the U.S. to buy grain this year is turning up again in a number of grain trade newsletters.

There is a very apparent need for more grain to feed that nation's livestock numbers, which have been increasing, but that doesn't necessarily mean that the Russians will buy.

They are very shrewd traders, so won't make their moves public until they have the best possible deal for the grain, if they do decide to buy.

Red China apparently has one of the best crops in years, which should remove them from the market, but their grain reserves are fairly low, so they could still end up in the world market looking for grain.

France has an overwhelming amount of soft wheat and is getting worried about how to get rid of it. French farmers are feeding corn rather than wheat to their livestock. Their cattle producers, like ours, are cutting back on grain feeding.

The Common Market nations tend to be dominated by France, which in the past has unloaded huge amounts of surplus butter by practically giving it away to Russia.

They recently made a huge sale of wheat to Morocco at prices well below current world market prices.

With the U.S. government failure to support grain prices here under the new vetoed farm bill the world grain market appears to be turning much softer. Harvest time prices could be rather grim.

Farm Pond Early Conservation Answer

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Water is vital to humans, animals and plants, but like fire, too much of it in the wrong place is very unwelcome.

A parade of floods and droughts that endangered the lives and income of early settlers encouraged them to seek ways to even out the water supply and prevent soil losses.

The humble farm pond is one of the primary tools available to aid in the conservation of water, soil, wildlife. It also provides recreation and improves the quality of water in Nebraska.

11,000 Acres Irrigated
Nearly 11,000 acres of land

were irrigated from farm ponds in Gage County alone during last year's drought, according to Ron Fleece, manager of the Lower Blue Natural Resource District. Bill Patterson, assistant state conservationist for water resources points out that wild ducks nest in some farm ponds while others are used by wild fowl as they migrate across the state.

"Virtually all farm ponds are stocked with fish providing a lot of recreation. I saw a picture of a seven-pound bass this week that was taken from a farm pond near Aurora," Patterson said.

Fish Stocking Issue
Patterson said that there were no statistics on how much recreation comes from farm ponds, but noted that Game Commission officials had testified against legislation proposing that fish stocking be limited to those ponds that were open to the general public.

"Most farmers do some fishing or their family does and they let friends and relatives fish there. I would venture to say that five out of 10 farmers will let a stranger fish if you ask. You might get a lecture on the virtues of closing a gate and be told to pick up your beer cans, but they will usually let you fish," he said.

Farm ponds collect excess rain water, reducing the potential for flooding downstream and provide water for livestock, but there are other conservation methods that conserve both water and the soil it carries away during heavy rains.

Terraces, grassed waterways, minimum tillage, and strip cropping are all tools in the fight to keep soil where it is and water where it falls on the land.

Gullies Halted
Gullies that once deepened with every rain have been halted by dams with a pipe to allow the water to collect during rains and then trickle out slowly.

In addition to conserving water, these same efforts reduce soil loss, prevent gullies, silting of lakes and ponds and reduce the amount of pollutants in creeks and rivers.

The effort may actually have improved some streams to a point where water is now of better quality than it was before Nebraska was settled, but we still have a long way to go.

"When we had 10 million buffalo wallowing in the Platte it wasn't very clean, but we also have some streams that are somewhat like gravey," Patterson said.

Patterson said the soil in the streams comes from sheet erosion on land that farmers feel is so level that it doesn't need terracing. The soil also comes

'Can't Stop It All

"You can never stop all the soil movement, but you can greatly reduce it. This is really what our conservation programs are about. Sediment or fine soil is still our worst pollutant," he said.

Stopping the soil makes fields easier to farm, holds fertility where it will produce crops and keeps fertilizer and pesticides out of streams because they travel along with the soil particles carried by flood waters.

Planting of 30,000 to 40,000 trees and shrubs a year are also a part of the soil and water conservation programs. The roots of these plants hold soil in place. A habitat for all sorts of wild life and even shade for cattle on pasture is provided. Another side of water conservation is more efficient use of irrigation water by building pits to collect surplus irrigation water and put it back on the land instead of allowing it to run down to the creek.

Gated Pipe Systems
New automated gated pipe irrigation systems are doing a better job of irrigating with less water than old methods, according to Bill Reinsch, an agronomist with the Soil Conservation Service.

"A bigger problem than unused tail water is excessive water use on one end of the irrigation run and not enough water on the opposite end of the row." This allows too much water to get underground carrying along nitrogen, which creates problems we just can't solve, he said.

"Farmers have got to learn how to do a better job of irrigating using less water," he said.

The only tools the Soil Conservation Service has to make farmers do a better job of conserving water and soil is education efforts and cost sharing programs operated by the SCS and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"A farmer can't afford a $40,000 flood retention structure alone, but will build one with some help in covering the cost. We have come a long way in reducing flood and silt damage in 40 years of soil conservation work, but the job is far from done," Patterson said.

Guard Force In Tornado Area Rotated, Reduced

Omaha (UPI) — The Nebraska National Guard pulled 1,330 troops out of Omaha Sunday night and "Operation Thundering Herd" began with a fresh influx of 275 Guardsmen to become part of the mobile security force patrolling the tornado-stricken northwest and southwest portions of the city.

Most of the Guardsmen had been in Omaha since Tuesday after the twisters roared through the 2,000-square-block area.

The Guardsmen entering the National Guard armory near the tornado-stricken area on Mercy Road at 72nd St. were jubilant. One, wearing a cowboy hat, said, "We have done our job, and we were needed. Now it's time to go home."

The new operation involved mobile guard security units backed up by Omaha police. A Guard spokesman said his men would be carrying unloaded 45-caliber pistols, while police would be armed. Barricades, which had been up in the area since Tuesday night, were withdrawn.

A colonel in the Army reserve told UPI there had been a "considerable influx" of vehicles bearing out-of-state license plates into the area over the weekend, and he interpreted this as meaning "the professionals might be in town."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky praised the Guard for a "tremendous job," and said that despite the turnout of 900 volunteers Sunday to clear debris "we will continue until the job is done."

Nearly 5,000 volunteer showed up Saturday, but Zorinsky aides Sunday said the slowdown was attributed to several factors, including the weather.

Mayor's assistant Eugene Brailey said, "Today was also Mother's Day, and some church services didn't get out until noon. Then it rained for about an hour, and some probably figured it wasn't worth turning out for."

However, Brailey said those who did turn out "worked their fannies off for which we, again, are entirely grateful."

If there is humor in a tragic situation, top Zorinsky administration sources elaborated Sunday on what the mayor had meant Saturday when he said "we had a little trouble with the Fire Department but we got it straightened out" as far as debris burning was concerned.

Zorinsky administration sources said a top Omaha Fire Department official demanded that the burning sites be protected by trenches and "everything else."

"We kept getting debris piled higher and higher," the source said. "But the Fire Department wouldn't let us burn it. Finally we said to hell with it and requisitioned a helicopter. We went around and lit the rubble.

"Shortly after we did it," the source said, "we called the Fire Department and said, 'You might want to send somebody out to protect our fires.' They did, but there was virtually nothing they could do to put them out."

The Zorinsky administration official who initiated the igniting of the debris piles is now nicknamed "the Torch."

Omaha Man Can't Find Words To Say Thank You

Omaha (AP) — Daniel Surdell, a 26-year-old lithographer, was typical of hundreds of Omahans who have received aid since Tuesday's tornado wiped out their homes.

John Hasby of West Nebraska Express said most of the boxes contained clothing, though there was some food. One farmer was said to have brought in a five-ton load of potatoes.

Fulcher flew 172 combat missions in Vietnam, 102 over North Vietnam.

Surdell said the Department of Housing and Urban Development officials offered temporary housing for up to a year. He said HUD would make up any difference between the housing allowance paid by his insurance company and the actual cost of housing in comparable facilities.

There was other assistance, too. Red Cross officials said they have paid out more than $109,000 in emergency aid to the tornado victims.

The Red Cross also has been providing meals to tornado victims and to volunteers in the disaster areas, officials said.

The Salvation Army has contributed more than 8,000 hours of volunteer work to help tornado victims as of late Saturday, Maj. Donald Arnold said.

He said volunteers, about a third of them uniformed Army members, have been doing such things as staffing canteens in the disaster area and picking up and sorting clothing for those in need.

There also was a helping hand from the Scottsbluff area of western Nebraska. Bee Line

Guard Force In Tornado Area Rotated, Reduced

Omaha (UPI) — The Nebraska National Guard pulled 1,330 troops out of Omaha Sunday night and "Operation Thundering Herd" began with a fresh influx of 275 Guardsmen to become part of the mobile security force patrolling the tornado-stricken northwest and southwest portions of the city.

Most of the Guardsmen had been in Omaha since Tuesday after the twisters roared through the 2,000-square-block area.

The Guardsmen entering the National Guard armory near the tornado-stricken area on Mercy Road at 72nd St. were jubilant. One, wearing a cowboy hat, said, "We have done our job, and we were needed. Now it's time to go home."

The new operation involved mobile guard security units backed up by Omaha police. A Guard spokesman said his men would be carrying unloaded .45-caliber pistols, while police would be armed. Barriades, which had been up in the area since Tuesday night, were withdrawn.

A colonel in the Army reserve told UPI there had been a "considerable influx" of vehicles bearing out-of-state license plates into the area over the weekend, and he interpreted this as meaning "the professionals might be in town."

Mayor Edward Zorinsky praised the Guard for a "tremendous job," and said that despite the turnout of 900 volunteers Sunday to clear debris "we will continue until the job is done."

Nearly 5,000 volunteer showed up Saturday, but Zorinsky aides Sunday said the slowdown was attributed to several factors, including the weather.

Mayoral assistant Eugene Brailey said, "Today was also Mother's Day, and some church services didn't get out until noon. Then it rained for about an hour, and some probably figured it wasn't worth turning out for."

However, Brailey said those who did turn out "worked their fannies off for which we, again, are entirely grateful."

If there is humor in a tragic situation, top Zorinsky administration sources elaborated Sunday on what the mayor had meant Saturday when he said "we had a little trouble with the Fire Department but we got it straightened out" as far as debris burning was concerned.

Zorinsky administration sources said a top Omaha Fire Department official demanded that the burning sites be protected by trenches and "everything else."

"We kept getting debris piled higher and higher," the source said. "But the Fire Department wouldn't let us burn it. Finally we said to hell with it and requisitioned a helicopter. We went around and lit the rubble.

"Shortly after we did it," the source said, "we called the Fire Department and said, 'You might want to send somebody out to protect our fires.' They did, but there was virtually nothing they could do to put them out."

The Zorinsky administration official who initiated the igniting of the debris piles is now nicknamed "the Torch."

Omaha Man Can't Find Words To Say Thank You

Omaha (AP) — Daniel Surdell, a 26-year-old lithographer, was typical of hundreds of Omahans who have received aid since Tuesday's tornado wiped out their homes.

"If I could afford it, I'd like to take a full-page newspaper ad and thank everyone. I just don't have words to explain it."

deduction from either 1974 or 1975 gross income.

In case he needs more money to buy a comparable home because of higher building costs, he was told by the Small Business Administration the cost between insurance and replacement could be obtained at 5% interest.

Motor Freight and West Nebraska Express Inc. were delivering a truck each of clothing to the Salvation Army in Omaha.

Mostly Clothing

John Hasby of West Nebraska Express said most of the boxes contained clothing, though there was some food. One farmer was said to have brought in a five-ton load of potatoes.

A Salvation Army Relief Fund was in operation at banks in Scottsbluff and Gering and a Kiwanis Club has begun to collect 100 men's suits for Omahans.

In 1955, when Scottsbluff and Gering suffered through a tornado aftermath, the first donation came from the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha.

He had gotten assurance from his insurance company that the $35,400 home policy would be paid, and arranged for food stamps, clothing and temporary housing.

Then he learned from the Internal Revenue Service under certain conditions he could get a Surdell said the Department of Housing and Urban Development officials offered temporary housing for up to a year. He said HUD would make up any difference between the housing allowance paid by his insurance company and the actual cost of housing in comparable facilities.

There was other assistance, too. Red Cross officials said they have paid out more than $109,000 in emergency aid to the tornado victims.

The Red Cross also has been providing meals to tornado victims and to volunteers in the disaster areas, officials said.

The Salvation Army has contributed more than 8,000 hours of volunteer work to help tornado victims as of late Saturday, Maj. Donald Arnold said.

He said volunteers, about a third of them uniformed Army members, have been doing such things as staffing canteens in the disaster area and picking up and sorting clothing for those in need.

There also was a helping hand from the Scottsbluff area of western Nebraska. Bee Line

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CHAIRMAN AND THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MALCOLM, NEBRASKA:

SECTION 1. This Ordinance has been presented by initiative of the voters of the Village of Malcolm, Nebraska, and as such may only be repealed or amended by referendum.

SECTION 2. SECTION 3. If, at the time of the enactment of this Ordinance, the total outstanding bonds in the name of the Village of Malcolm, Nebraska, exceed 35% of the assessed valuation, no further bonds shall be issued until said bonded indebtedness is less than 35% of the assessed valuation and then shall be issued only to the extent that the total of all outstanding bonds, plus the proposed issue, does not exceed 35% of the assessed valuation of the Village, except as provided in Section 5 herein.

Said notice shall be published in the same manner the law requires for an ordinance to be published.

(b) The notice shall state that any 20 voters of the Village may submit an alternative proposal to the Clerk within 30 days of its first publication.

By JON SWEET
Omaha (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., said Sunday he would officially announce his candidacy to succeed U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., within six weeks.

McCollister, 53, was endorsed by Hruska, 70, who Sunday announced his retirement at the end of his current term in a copyrighted story in the Omaha-World Herald.

McCollister said Hruska told him Friday the story was going to appear in the Sunday paper, and when asked if he was pleased with Hruska's endorsement, replied, "Sure, I'm happy. I'm happy for his and anybody's endorsement."

McCollister said he had "no idea" who would run against him, but added, "I expect there will be many of them."

Exon Expected
A top McCollister campaign organizer, however, told UPI that McCollister forces are operating on the assumption that popular Democratic Gov. J. James Exon will resign in the middle of his second term and seek the Senate post.

Exon, contacted by telephone in Lincoln, said, "I have assumed all along that it was likely that Senator Hruska would not seek reelection."

"The senator's announcement," Exon said, "hasn't altered my position in any way."

Exon reiterated that he has "no intentions at this time of running for the U.S. Senate in 1976. But I do not intend to allow the Republican opposition a clear field by eliminating completely the possibility that I may run."

'No Commitment'
Although Exon said he has mentioned several names of possible Democratic contenders in conversations with newsmen, "I have not made any commitment, any suggestion or even a hint of a commitment or a suggestion to any possible candidate for the Democratic Party."

"It is safe to assume," Exon said, "when the time comes I will have a keen interest in whoever the Democratic nominee is and will assist in the election of that nominee."

Exon ran as a team with Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan of Hastings in 1974, and when asked if he had made any commitment to Whelan about succeeding him if he should resign, Exon said, "Any comment in that direction is totally untrue."

"There was no commitment, not even any discussion about a Senate bid by me when Jerry Whelan agreed to be my running mate as lieutenant governor in 1974."

However, the McCollister campaign source said it would be "politically foolish" for Exon to wait until 1978 when Nebraska's other Senate seat, now held by Republican Carl T. Curtis, comes up for grabs. Curtis has given no indication he plans to retire.

'Very Popular Now'
"The governor is very popular now," the McCollister source said. "And if he waits for two more years, a lot can happen, politically speaking, to erode that popularity."

McCollister of Omaha said he was "not worried about" whether President Ford would lead the Republican ticket in 1976.

"I think 1976 will be a crucial year for the country," McCollister said. "I think the Senate campaign will be on the issues between the two candidates and not on who the presidential candidates are."

McCollister conceded he isn't "well known outstate and therefore I have a lot of work to do."

"I plan, beginning with the announcement of my candidacy," McCollister said, "to spend almost every weekend in the state."

McCollister's top aide, Charles Hagel, has been making frequent trips to Omaha to lay the groundwork for the senatorial campaign. McCollister said at present he has a "grassroots committee just starting. They're a whole bunch of people who for the past six months have been saying they're going to help."

McCollister was elected to the Douglas County Board in 1964 and was elected to the House in 1970 when he defeated incumbent Second District Congressman Glenn Cunningham in the GOP primary. He handily defeated Douglas County Commissioner Dan Lynch of Omaha, the Democratic candidate, in the congressional race last November.

A former McCollister aide, Omaha City Councilman Monte Taylor, has told friends he expects to seek his former boss's congressional seat. Other possible candidates include State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha on the Democratic side and Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan on the Republican ticket.

Zorinsky Possibility
Mayor Edward Zorinsky, who has said he only wants one term as the city's chief executive, could either seek the Senate or House seat. Zorinsky is a Republican, but Exon at one time told newsmen he would like to see Zorinsky switch parties and run as a Democrat.

Hruska, the Senate's second ranking Republican, told the World-Herald that for a "number of years" he has felt his present term should be his last.

"I did not harden that feeling into a decision until this time," Hruska said. "I just put off this evil day."

McCollister Plans To Announce Within Weeks

By JON SWEET
Omaha (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Nebr., said Sunday he would officially announce his candidacy to succeed U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Nebr., within six weeks.

McCollister, 53, was endorsed by Hruska, 70, who Sunday announced his retirement at the end of his current term in a copyrighted story in the Omaha-World Herald.

McCollister said Hruska told him Friday the story was going to appear in the Sunday paper, and when asked if he was pleased with Hruska's endorsement, replied, "Sure, I'm happy. I'm happy for his and anybody's endorsement."

McCollister said he had "no idea" who would run against him, but added, "I expect there will be many of them."

Exon Expected
A top McCollister campaign organizer, however, told UPI that McCollister forces are operating on the assumption that popular Democratic Gov. J. James Exon will resign in the middle of his second term and seek the Senate post.

Exon, contacted by telephone in Lincoln, said, "I have assumed all along that it was likely that Senator Hruska would not seek reelection."

"The senator's announcement," Exon said, "hasn't altered my position in any way."

Exon reiterated that he has "no intentions at this time of running for the U.S. Senate in 1976. But I do not intend to allow the Republican opposition a clear field by eliminating completely the possibility that I may run."

'No Commitment'
Although Exon said he has mentioned several names of possible Democratic contenders in conversations with newsmen, "I have not made any commitment, any suggestion or even a hint of a commitment or a suggestion to any possible candidate for the Democratic Party."

"It is safe to assume," Exon said, "when the time comes I will have a keen interest in whoever the Democratic nominee is and will assist in the election of that nominee."

Exon ran as a team with Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan of Hastings in 1974, and when asked if he had made any commitment to Whelan about succeeding him if he should resign, Exon said, "Any comment in that direction is totally untrue."

"There was no commitment, not even any discussion about a Senate bid by me when Jerry Whelan agreed to be my running mate as lieutenant governor in 1974."

However, the McCollister campaign source said it would be "politically foolish" for Exon to wait until 1978 when Nebraska's other Senate seat, now held by Republican Carl T. Curtis, comes up for grabs. Curtis has given no indication he plans to retire.

'Very Popular Now'
"The governor is very popular now," the McCollister source said. "And if he waits for two more years, a lot can happen, politically speaking, to erode that popularity."

McCollister of Omaha said he was "not worried about" whether President Ford would lead the Republican ticket in 1976.

"I think 1976 will be a crucial year for the country," McCollister said. "I think the Senate campaign will be on the issues between the two candidates and not on who the presidential candidates are."

McCollister conceded he isn't "well known outstate and therefore I have a lot of work to do."

"I plan, beginning with the announcement of my candidacy," McCollister said, "to spend almost every weekend in the state."

McCollister's top aide, Charles Hagel, has been making frequent trips to Omaha to lay the groundwork for the senatorial campaign. McCollister said at present he has a "grassroots committee just starting. They're a whole bunch of people who for the past six months have been saying they're going to help."

McCollister was elected to the Douglas County Board in 1964 and was elected to the House in 1970 when he defeated incumbent Second District Congressman Glenn Cunningham in the GOP primary. He handily defeated Douglas County Commissioner Dan Lynch of Omaha, the Democratic candidate, in the congressional race last November.

A former McCollister aide, Omaha City Councilman Monte Taylor, has told friends he expects to seek his former boss's congressional seat. Other possible candidates include State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha on the Democratic side and Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan on the Republican ticket.

Zorinsky Possibility
Mayor Edward Zorinsky, who has said he only wants one term as the city's chief executive, could either seek the Senate or House seat. Zorinsky is a Republican, but Exon at one time told newsmen he would like to see Zorinsky switch parties and run as a Democrat.

Hruska, the Senate's second ranking Republican, told the World-Herald that for a "number of years" he has felt his present term should be his last.

"I did not harden that feeling into a decision until this time," Hruska said. "I just put off this evil day."

R. Kling, 22, and Daniel Fix, 19, both of Scottsbluff.

The patrol said the Kling car was parked in a southbound lane at a bridge when the left side of the vehicle was struck by a vehicle driven by Dennis Kay, 27, of Scottsbluff.

The patrol reported that Kling and his passenger, Fix, were out inspecting the damage when a northbound car driven by Mark Gies, 18, of Scottsbluff hit two of the men in the roadway.

In the Pender accident, the victim was identified by the State Patrol as Charles A. Peterson, 57, of Pender.

Troopers said his motorcycle was southbound on Highway 9 north of Pender when it was in collision with a northbound pickup driven by Keith Pomeroy, 41, also of Pender.

MILTONS' FOLLY 1974

The master bedroom extended into the swimming pool!

Perhaps not literally, but the swimming pool in the backyard of the Bob and Grace Milton home in northeast Lincoln is the result of a remodeling project which started out to merely enlarge the master bedroom.

Gerry Switzer
Dave Kennedy

"One thing just kept calling for another," Milton said, as he looked over the food supply for the more than 700 people who showed up for his annual luau in the backyard.

He said the project to enlarge the small existing bedroom in the house he and his wife purchased ten years ago just kept growing.

"The contractor told us that we might as well extend the addition to include enlargement of the living room," he said, pointing out that there would have been a gap of wasted space if the addition stopped with the bedroom.

"So, we said to go ahead," Milton said.

Relating the many problems encountered in such an undertaking, Milton said that when they put on the house addition, which included a redwood deck patio around the house with access from both the enlarged master bedroom and living room, "We had just had a new underground sprinkler system put in the back yard.

"Well, the trucks in and out during construction, just tore the yard apart along with the sprinkler system," he said.

This is when the Miltons decided that a swimming pool might be the answer.

But, this wasn't the end of the obstacles, according to the couple.

"We found out that the sewer line ran right through the middle of where the pool was to be located," he said. The line had to be moved.

With all the problems solved, the Miltons a year ago unveiled their 20-by-40-foot swimming pool which has a unique vinyl bubble cover so the heated pool can be used during the winter months.

But the first week of May the bubble comes off, and the Miltons host a party which attracts hundreds of friends, neighbors and acquaintances including University of Nebraska football players.

Frequent weekend parties and the annual luau for hundreds don't seem to be a problem for the Miltons, who own and operate the Misty Lounge in Havelock.

The 1975 luau initiated a new gas barbecue pit with the roasting of a 235-pound whole pig, prime rib and some pork roasts.

Also featured in the backyard resort area are redwood umbrella tables, a hammock chair suspended from a large branch of the oak tree around which the redwood deck is built, and a bathhouse.

The deck, pool and the artificial turf area surrounding the pool leave no back yard to mow in the summertime.

What happens to the snow in the winter? Milton said, "The good Lord puts it there, so I leave it for Him to take away."

Mrs. Milton, who gives her husband all the credit for their backyard entertainment center, says the inside is her project.

Proudly displaying the walk-in closet and elaborate bath which now occupies the area which was originally the bedroom, Mrs. Milton opens the drapes in the new bedroom onto the swimming pool, saying:

"This bedroom is all we intended to do."

Is Three Times Three Too Many?

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl, graduating from high school this June. My problem is my parents. They don't want me to have anything to do with my boyfriend, who is 19, because I've been impregnated by him three times.

The first two times I was forced to get abortions, and the third time I waited too long, had the baby and placed him for adoption.

My parents have also heard bad things about my boyfriend, but he did those things when he was 15 and 16, and he has reformed now. He has a job and is staying out of trouble.

Abby, there is absolutely no way I could ever stop seeing him. He's a lot of fun to be with, and we love each other and want to get married some day. Please don't tell me to date others because he is the only one for me. We've been going steady for five years and don't like to sneak around behind my parents backs. Please help me convince them to let me see him.

IN LOVE IN N.J.

DEAR IN: Sorry. I can't blame them for feeling as they do. They have been through three nightmarish experiences with you, and they're not looking for a fourth. When you have matured and are on your own, you won't need their permission, but because of your past mistakes you'll have to wait until then.

DEAR ABBY: With all due respect to Ripley's "Believe it or Not," there is no documentation to support its story that a 99-year-old American Indian woman gave birth to a child. And the same goes for the one about the 64-year-old woman who was said to have produced a child with her 80-year-old husband.

"The Guinness Book of Records" has documents to prove that Mrs. Ruth Alice Kistler (nee Taylor), at 57 years and 129 days old, gave birth to a daughter, Suzan, in Glendale, California on Oct. 18, 1956.

This is the oldest recorded birth of which there is certain evidence.

A.N.M.D.

DEAR M.D.: I'll buy "Guinness." But how about the Biblical Sarah who, at age 90, bore a son for her husband, Abraham, when he was 100? (Genesis 21)

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago, my father was told that he had kidney failure and would have to go on a dialysis machine.

Because his kidney failure was recent, the chance of obtaining a kidney transplant was small (There are adults and children who have waited 10 years and longer for a kidney transplant because Americans are either unaware of the need or have hangups about having parts of their bodies removed after death.)

Thank heavens there was a dear man who had no such hangup. Unfortunately, he was in a fatal car accident, but he gave up his kidney, which matched my father's needs. That was two years ago, and my family is eternally grateful to that generous man.

Needless to say, the members of my entire family are card-carrying kidney donors. How I wish more people would become donors. If they knew how much it meant to people like us, they would be.

M.C.P. IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR M.C.P.: I am, and have been for four years. And if my readers want to leave a legacy of inestimable value, write to The National Kidney Foundation, 116 East 27th Street, N.Y., N.Y. 10016 for a donor card.

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago I met a man to whom I was very much attracted. I gave him my phone number, and he said he would call me.

I waited a week, and he didn't call, so I got his phone number and called him. He seemed glad to hear from me, and he asked me out. I had a fabulous time. I gave him my number again to be sure he had it, and he said I'd be hearing from him. Well, it's been a week, and he hasn't called.

I don't like running after a man, but if I wait for his call, he may never call me, and I really want to see him again.

How do men feel about women calling them?

IMPATIENT

DEAR IMP: Some men enjoy being pursued, but most do not. I think it's his turn to call you.

Everyone has a problem.

What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Camping Not For Grouches

By LLOYD GREEN
(c) Chicago Sun Times

Now that the Ice Age is receding and the monsoons are tapering off, it's time to start thinking about fighting snakes and mosquitoes. Some people call it camping.

For the uninitiated, camping is that growing pasture in which the participants get halfway to their destination and suddenly slap their foreheads with the exclamation, "I forgot the hatchet!" or "I forgot the tent poles!"

Notice the happy expressions on the faces of campers when they're driving along the interstate and the carport carrier suddenly opens like a parachute, spewing swimming suits, plastic mattresses, inner tubes and tennis shoes.

Or watch the smiles of tire-changers besides the road as they unload unbelievable amounts of camping equipment from their trunks to get to the spare.

Camping is not for grouches, which explains why my wife has always wondered about my addiction to it.

The first time my wife and two children and I went camping

Summer Hard On Foods

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The advent of hot weather accents the need for more careful planning to insure safe food.

Sara Beck, consumer specialist with the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, emphasizes that unless the consumer takes certain precautions the cooperative efforts of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and state agencies to make available clean, safe and wholesome food will be in vain.

Proper care in buying, storing, handling and cooking food are very important, according to Miss Beck.

"Shop for meat and poultry and other perishable foods just before you check out," Miss Beck urges as a basic shopping practice.

"Unless you make this a consistent practice, you may be tied up in store traffic or diverted by bargain hunting longer than you expect and thus risk contamination of the perishables in your basket," she noted.

In buying frozen foods, Miss Beck urges the consumer to make sure frozen foods are hard-frozen and have been kept below the frostline in the supermarket freezer.

Signals that frozen foods have been poorly handled, according to Miss Beck, are softness in a frozen food package and ice coating on the outside of the package.

When buying refrigerated foods, Miss Beck says the food should be checked to make sure it is cold — not just room temperature.

"When you're checking out, ask the clerk to bag cold foods together, she said, explaining that the cold foods remain colder longer when so packaged.

Alcoholism Linked To Sterility

Frozen or refrigerated foods interspersed with room temperature foods may warm up more quickly, especially if you are a half hour or more getting them to your home freezer or refrigerator, Miss Beck said.

"Never, never be tempted to do any more shopping after you have loaded your car with frozen or refrigerated foods," she said, adding, "Head for home and unload these perishable foods first."

She warns that food may not be safe to eat if held more than two hours at temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees. That includes all of the time of buying, storing, preparation and serving.

Chances of maintaining the good quality of the food you buy depends on your buying good food and handling it properly, Miss Beck emphasized.

My wife, Marie, and the kids, Eric and Alma, slept peacefully through it all. But I, protector of hearth and home, was up half the night shuning a flashlight at the tent seams waiting for water to being pouring in. Not a drop came through.

During the night, however, I heard a commotion and peered out the door flap to see the man at the next campsite pounding pegs amid rain and lightning flashes in an effort to get his blown-down tent back up.

He was a Spanish-language professor in Ohio, and he and his brood had spent the summer camping across the country and back.

Kids, particularly city kids, find no end of wonders on camping trips. One thing that never fails to fascinate them, the three-or-four-hole toilets that grace many camp-grounds. Most children, and some adults, can't resist looking down the holes.

But I thought the fascination had become too much for one man I saw at Gov. Dodge State Park near Dodgeville, Wis., when I found him fishing down one of the holes. He saw my startled look and said, "My damn kid was looking down here and his glasses dropped off. I'm trying to get them."

I'm happy to report that he had a successful day of fishing.

Watch For Insects In Winter Wear

When you pack away your winter clothes, be on the alert for insects with a taste for natural fibers.

Wool, silk, mohair, feathers, leather and fur are all targets for insects that eat animal protein, according to Bob Roselle, Extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Carpet beetles are often the cause of carpet and clothing damage, with the beetles being the most damaging in the larva stage when they look like fuzzy brown worms.

When mature, the hard-shelled beetles will seek out light and can be found on warm window sills and under lamps, Roselle said.

Less common are the white clothing moths. White silk cases and fine webs are signs that they're present in carpets, upholstery or clothes.

Roselle lists the following precautions for keeping insects from putting the bite on stored winter clothing:

- Keep furs in professional cold storage. Low temperatures will prevent the bugs from feeding or reproducing.
- Dry clean woolen clothing and pack in tight containers with paradichlorobenzene crystals (PDB) instead of the old-fashioned moth balls. Use about one-half pound to 100 cubic feet.
- Treat washable woollens the same way, laundering instead of drycleaning.

—Vacuum carpets frequently, moving the furniture and using insecticide under heavy pieces.

If insects are a problem in your upholstery, vacuum and use a nonstain insecticide. Air thoroughly, or use outside.

Giorgio Belladonna, winner of 16 world championships and member of the famed Italian Blue Team that has dominated the world bridge scene since 1959, is a player of infinite resource.

On top of his oft-demonstrated talent for rarely making an error in judgment — the trademark of all great players — Belladonna has an imagination that seemingly knows no bounds. He invents bids and plays on the spot that no one has ever thought of before, and bridge literature is replete with many of his exploits.

Consider this deal where Belladonna, playing the Precision System, opened the bidding with two clubs (showing a minimum opening bid with long clubs) and found himself on lead against three notrump. The hand was played in the 1972 London Sunday Times Pair Championship, an annual event to which 16 of the world's best pairs are invited.

Belladonna made the extraordinary opening lead of the ten of clubs, and declarer (Terence Reese) could not offset this lethal blow. He won with the queen, entered dummy with a heart, and returned a low diamond.

East rushed up with the ace, catching partner's king — but that didn't really matter. East returned a club and the contract quickly went down two.

At the other tables where the contract was three notrump, West led either his fourth best club or a lower club, and in all these cases declarer made three notrump after winning the trick in dummy with the nine. South lost at most two diamonds and two clubs.

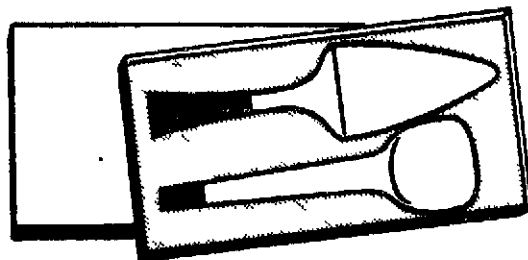

Belladonna reasoned that Reese had the Q-J of clubs for his bid and, in order to guard against the possibility of dummy's holding the singleton nine, he led the ten of clubs rather than a lower club. No truer arrow was ever shot!

Camping is not for grouches, which explains why my wife has always wondered about my addiction to it.
The first time my wife and two children and I went camping some years back, we chose Starved Rock Park near Ottawa, Ill. We had a spanking-new tent and I hadn't bothered to read the fine print in the directions until we got there.

"If your tent leaks the first time you use it in the rain, don't let this bother you," the directions said. "This merely means that the seams have not pulled together well. The leaking will stop after the tent shrinks a bit."
I don't need to tell you that it rained that first night. I poured. The wind blew, the trees shook and thunder and lightning rolled across the sky.

My wife, Marie, and the kids, Eric and Alma, slept peacefully through it all. But I, protector of hearth and home, was up half the night shining a flashlight at the tent seams waiting for water to be pouring in. Not a drop came through.
During the night, however, I heard a commotion and peered out the door flap to see the man at the next campsite pounding pegs amid rain and lightning flashes in an effort to get his blown-down tent back up.
He was a Spanish-language professor in Ohio, and he and his brood had spent the summer camping across the country and back.
Kids, particularly city kids, find no end of wonders on camping trips. One thing that never fails to fascinate them: the three-or-four-hole toilets that grace many camp-grounds. Most children, and some adults, can't resist looking down the holes.
But I thought the fascination had become too much for one man I saw at Gov. Dodge State Park near Dodgeville, Wis., when I found him fishing down one of the holes. He saw my startled look and said, "My damn kid was looking down here and his glasses dropped off. I'm trying to get them."
I'm happy to report that he had a successful day of fishing.

Summer Hard On Foods

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer
The advent of hot weather accents the need for more careful planning to insure safe food.
Sara Beck, consumer specialist with the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, emphasizes that unless the consumer takes certain precautions the cooperative efforts of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and state agencies to make available clean, safe and wholesome food will be in vain.
Proper care in buying, storing, handling and cooking food are very important, according to Miss Beck.
"Shop for meat and poultry and other perishable foods just before you check out," Miss Beck urges as a basic shopping practice.
"Unless you make this a consistent practice, you may be tied up in store traffic or diverted by bargain hunting longer than you expect and thus risk contamination of the perishables in your basket," she noted.

In buying frozen foods, Miss Beck urges the consumer to make sure frozen foods are hard-frozen and have been kept below the frostline in the supermarket freezer.
Signals that frozen foods have been poorly handled, according to Miss Beck, are softness in a frozen food package and ice coating on the outside of the package.
When buying refrigerated foods, Miss Beck says the food should be checked to make sure it is cold — not just room temperature.
"When you're checking out, ask the clerk to bag cold foods together, she said, explaining that the cold foods remain colder longer when so packaged.

Frozen or refrigerated foods interspersed with room temperature foods may warm up more quickly, especially if you are a half hour or more getting them to your home freezer or refrigerator, Miss Beck said.
"Never, never be tempted to do any more shopping after you have loaded your car with frozen or refrigerated foods," she said, adding, "Head for home and unload these perishable foods first."
She warns that food may not be safe to eat if held more than two hours at temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees. That includes all of the time of buying, storing, preparation and serving.
Chances of maintaining the good quality of the food you buy depends on your buying good food and handling it properly, Miss Beck emphasized.

Alcoholism Linked To Sterility

Pittsburgh (UPI) — A team of local scientists says it has found a possible link between alcoholism and sterility in men.
Dr. Joshua Perper, one of three scientists involved in a study of alcoholics in the Pittsburgh area, said many of them had atrophied testicles, pointing to a higher-than-normal likelihood of sterility among severe alcoholics.
The study was a joint effort of the University of Pittsburgh Epidemiology Department and the Allegheny County coroner's office.
Perper was unwilling to speculate that the tie-in between atrophy and sterility also might be related to a high rate of impotence among alcoholics.

Watch For Insects In Winter Wear

When you pack away your winter clothes, be on the alert for insects with a taste for natural fibers.
Wool, silk, mohair, feathers, leather and fur are all targets for insects that eat animal protein, according to Bob Roselle, Extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
Carpet beetles are often the cause of carpet and clothing damage, with the beetles being the most damaging in the larva stage when they look like fuzzy brown worms.
When mature, the hard-shelled beetles will seek out light and can be found on warm window sills and under lamps, Roselle said.

Less common are the white clothing moths. White silk cases and fine webs are signs that they're present in carpets, upholstery or clothes.
Roselle lists the following precautions for keeping insects from putting the bite on stored winter clothing:
—Keep furs in professional cold storage. Low temperatures will prevent the bugs from feeding or reproducing.
—Dry clean woolen clothing and pack in tight containers with paradichlorobenzene crystals (PDB) instead of the old-fashioned moth balls. Use about one-half pound to 100 cubic feet.
—Treat washable woolens the same way, laundering instead of drycleaning.

—Vacuum carpets frequently, moving the furniture and using insecticide under heavy pieces.
If insects are a problem in your upholstery, vacuum and use a nonstain insecticide. Air thoroughly, or use outside.

Giorgio Belladonna, winner of 16 world championships and member of the famed Italian Blue Team that has dominated the world bridge scene since 1959, is a player of infinite resource.
On top of his oft-demonstrated talent for rarely making an error in judgment — the trademark of all great players — Belladonna has an imagination that seemingly knows no bounds. He invents bids and plays on the spot that no one has ever thought of before, and bridge literature is replete with many of his exploits.

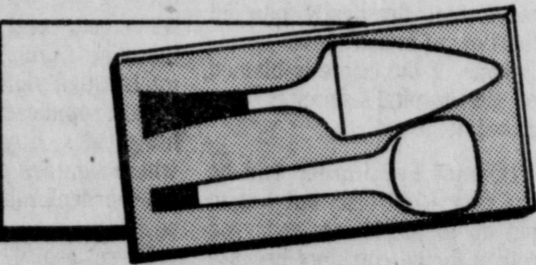

Consider this deal where Belladonna, playing the Precision System, opened the bidding with two clubs (showing a minimum opening bid with long clubs) and found himself on lead against three notrump. The hand was played in the 1972 London Sunday Times Pair Championship, an annual event to which 16 of the world's best pairs are invited.
Belladonna made the extraordinary opening lead of the ten of clubs, and declarer (Terence Reese) could not offset this lethal blow. He won with the queen, entered dummy with a heart, and returned a low diamond.
East rushed up with the ace, catching partner's king — but that didn't really matter. East returned a club and the contract quickly went down two.
At the other tables where the contract was three notrump, West led either his fourth best club or a lower club, and in all these cases declarer made three notrump after winning the trick in dummy with the nine. South lost at most two diamonds and two clubs.
Belladonna reasoned that Reese had the Q-J of clubs for his bid and, in order to guard against the possibility of dummy's holding the singleton nine, he led the ten of clubs rather than a lower club. No truer arrow was ever shot!

Ex-Airman, Refugee Wed

Asan, Guam (AP) — In warm sunshine, on a strip of palm-shaded beach, Thomas Hejl and Nguyen Thi Ut vowed to love forever.

There were bright tropical flowers, cake and champagne, and the island governor performed the marriage ceremony.

A few steps away was the bare refugee camp barracks where the newlyweds would spend their wedding night.

The marriage of the ex-airman and his Vietnamese sweetheart on Sunday was the first formal wedding ceremony at an evacuee camp on this Pacific island.

But at least a dozen other couples have slipped quietly into town for civil ceremonies in a judges' chambers in recent weeks.

"I've done half a dozen of the weddings," says Superior Court Judge Janet Weeks.

"Another judge has performed several . . . In every instance they have been American husbands and Vietnamese brides.

"The brides are extremely shy and very lovely," she noted. "Oh couples didn't have rings, and I've had my own wedding ring on and off several times to let them use it in the ceremony."

However, there were golden rings at the Hejl ceremony, symbols of a bittersweet love story which survived war, separation and the death of a child.

"We got these rings three and a half years ago," said Hejl, 25. "We couldn't get a wedding ceremony then so we just wore them and morally we were man and wife."

Nejl, of Farmingdale, N.Y., met Nguyen Thi Ut, 27, when he was stationed with the Air Force in her village of Nha Trang in 1971. They tried to marry then but were frustrated by red tape.

By 1972 Hejl had been transferred to Beale Air Force Base in California and subsequently was discharged there.

He began saving money for plane tickets and proper documents. But the war moved swiftly. The Viet Cong took Nha Trang. Nguyen Thi Ut fled to Saigon, and Hejl could not locate her.

After months of silence, Hejl received a phone call last week from his fiancée. She was in Guam in an evacuee camp where she had come after fleeing Saigon in a fishing boat.

Excitedly, Hejl flew to Guam, and, after two days of searching through a dozen camps housing thousands of refugees, he found her standing in the doorway of a tent.

It was then that she told him the saddest news of all — the couple's 3-year-old daughter, Linda, had been killed by Viet Cong bullets as she and her mother waited on the Vietnam coast for a boat ride to freedom.

The star-crossed romance, publicized in a local newspaper, drew instant response on this tiny Pacific U.S. territory. Gov. Ricardo Bordallo volunteered to marry the couple and legal documents were expedited.

A local businesswoman provided a delicate white wedding outfit for the bride and the Kiwanis Club donated a wedding cake and champagne.

The governor arrived with flowers and a second cake.

Marine Col. "Jinx" McCaine, the military commander on Guam, gave the bride away on the very spot where American troops first came ashore in 1944 to liberate the island in World War II.

There, in front of Asan Refugee Camp, dozens of Vietnamese evacuees gathered to watch the wedding. Wide-eyed children grinned as the bride passed out cake "for all the people."

"This is just beautiful," said Hejl. "I am very happy," said Mrs. Hejl.

"I think," said one young refugee in halting English, "this means something to all here. This means Americans and Vietnamese working together."

Viet Planes Rescued

Agana, Guam (AP) — The remnants of the U.S.-supplied South Vietnamese air force — nearly new F5 fighters, battered A37 fighters and some barely airworthy helicopters — arrived Sunday aboard the carrier USS Midway.

The odd piece in the collection, however, was a single-engine spotter plane which had arrived unannounced and uninvited as the Midway was transferring about 1,600 refugees to smaller ships, said Rear Adm. William L. Harris, Jr. He said crewmen radioed the pilot to ditch alongside the carrier, but he continued to circle.

"Three times he tried to drop notes on the flight deck. He would come swooping down and he'd miss and he'd miss," Harris said at a news briefing. One note finally lodged against a fire truck on the flight deck telling them the Vietnamese pilot had his wife and five children aboard and did not want to risk a water landing.

Once the deck was cleared, the tiny plane made a rough but safe landing, Harris said.

The Midway's assignment was to pick up 27 A37s and 25 F5s which had been flown to Thailand's Utopia Air Base by fleeing Vietnamese airmen.

The Midway also picked up 45 UH1 (Huey) helicopters and three CH47 (Chinook) helicopters, which were flown to the carrier crammed with as many as 50 refugees.

"Some of those helicopters I wouldn't get in myself, let alone with 50 people," said Capt. L. C. Chambers, the Midway's skipper.

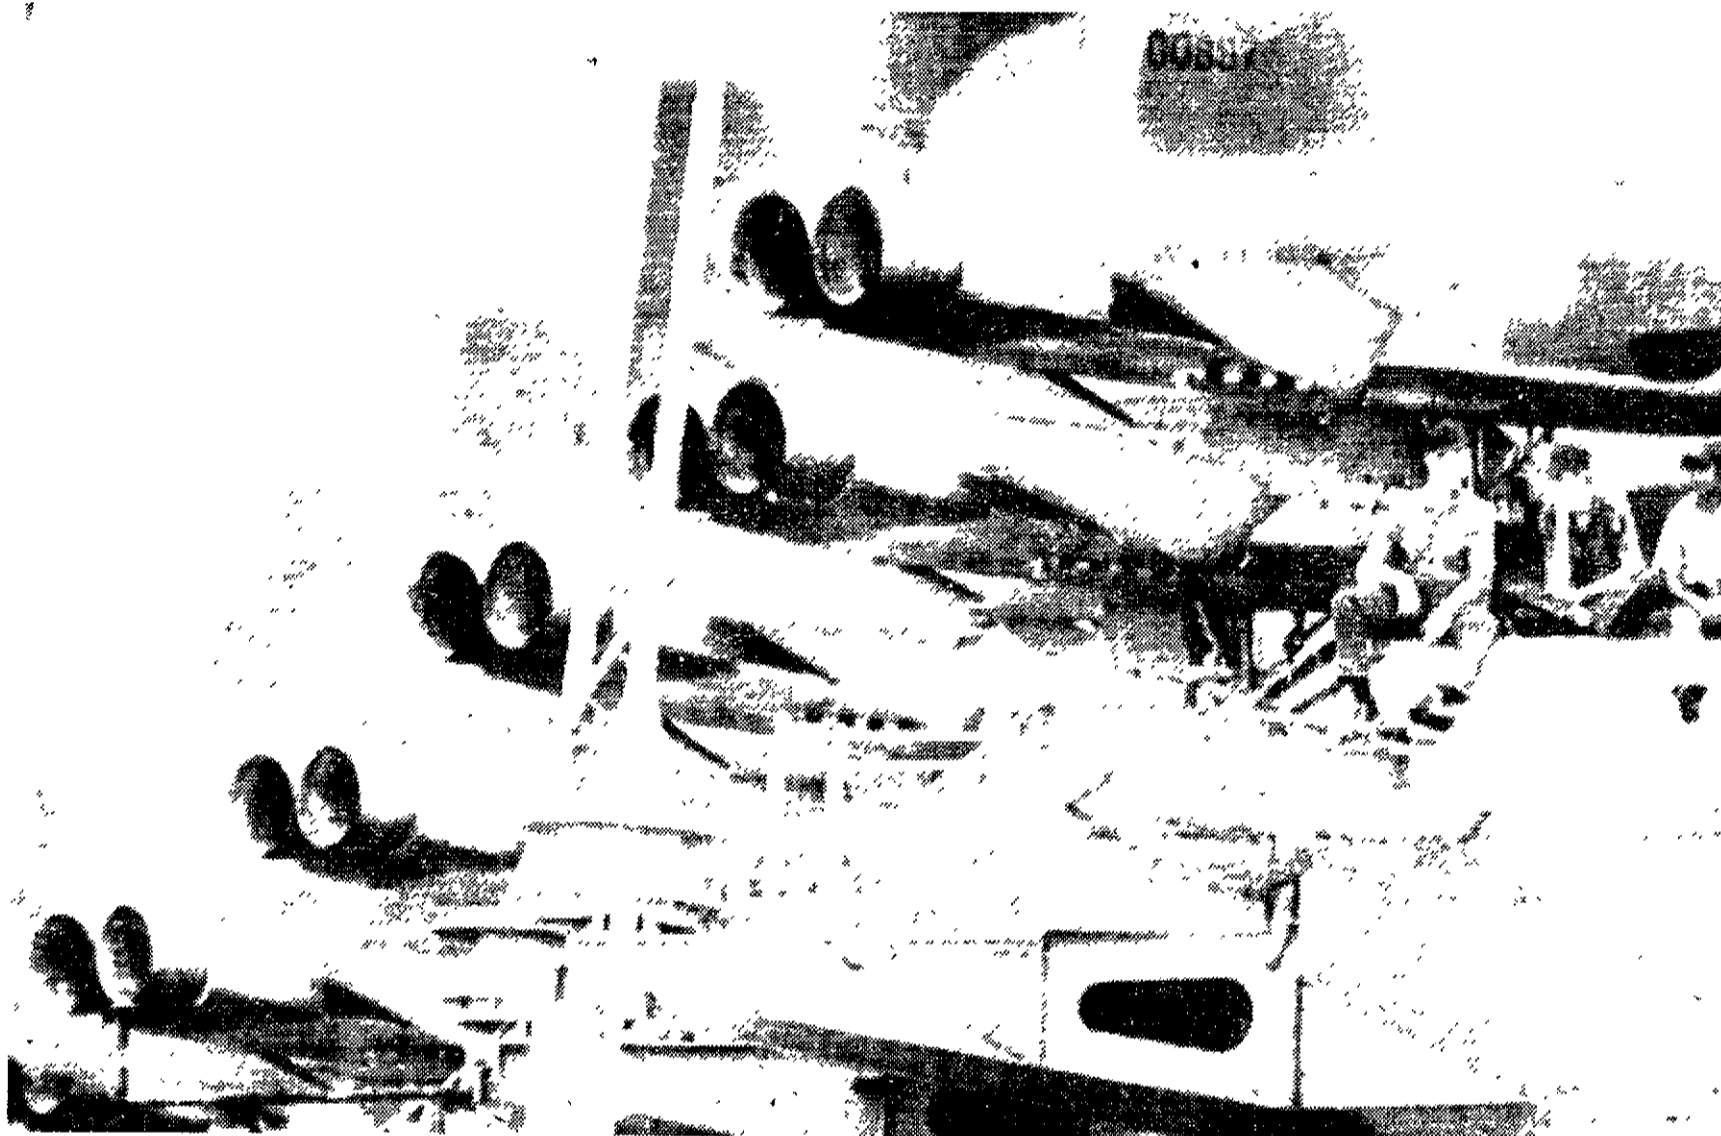

Some of the helicopters arrived with broken windows, peeling paint and no doors. Their interiors were littered with sandals, dirty clothes and stale food left behind by refugees.

Many of the helicopters still bore Vietnamese markings, but an insignia on the fighters had been hastily painted over in Thailand. Some of the F5s were less than a year old.

A pair of floating cranes pulled alongside the Midway in Apra Harbor to transfer the aircraft to barges which shuttled the planes to a storage area in the Naval shipyard. The unloading was expected to take two days.

Also aboard the Midway were six American citizens and 88 Vietnamese rescued from a sinking fishing boat in the Gulf of Siam.

Another massive influx of refugees was expected Monday with the scheduled arrival of four ships. The SS Green Wave was due at daybreak with 4,500 refugees, followed by the SS Green Port and the SS Green Forest with 4,000 refugees each and the USNS Sergeant Kimbrough with 3,600.

Lid Blown Off Hospital Scandal

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — The nation's second largest hospital is engulfed in a growing scandal in which 20 persons have been arrested in a criminal investigation of widespread theft, illicit drug traffic and prostitution.

A task force of state and local law enforcement officials — recently joined by federal prosecutors — has been working at Charity Hospital over two years.

Investigators say hospital employees, apparently acting independently, are responsible for most of the crime. A secret state police report, however, has linked several officials to organized crime.

Two employees have been charged with trying to obtain drugs with forged prescriptions. And the hospital's security director and four top assistants were fired after a doctor was charged with buying a stolen electrocardiograph.

Five other guards have either submitted resignations or been fired. Officials said at least 20 employees are under investigation.

Since the probe began two undercover narcotics agents have said that:

— At least one patient received an injection of distilled water instead of medication.

— Marijuana has been sold in the corridors.

— Thousands of pounds of meat have been stolen.

— Security guards arranged phony bomb scares so sections of the hospital could be pilfered in the confusion.

— A check of 900 of the hospital's 5,000 employees showed 170 had police records.

The agents, whose code names were Salt and Pepper, were pulled off the case after officials said their comments to newsmen had blown their cover. Salt and Pepper said inadequate security has led to much of the hospital's theft, which ranges from wheel chairs to $2,000 X-ray tubes.

"One security guard sold two lids (bags) of marijuana to my partner while I was watching," said Salt.

The men said they have seen guards help load stolen equipment into cars. Loose security, they said, also has permitted pimps to smuggle prostitutes onto the wards.

State police have taken over security operations at Charity, a move that drastically plugged the flow of stolen meat.

Some of the crime is blamed on the hospital's chronic overcrowding.

Director Lee Frazier said he has over 1,800 beds but has to put up to 3,000 patients a day on rollers in the corridors because there is no room in the wards. He said he could use 200 more nurses to care for the 1.3 million outpatient visits handled at the hospital every year.

Charity, founded in 1735 with money from a sailor's will, offers free service. Only Los Angeles County Hospital, with 2,100 beds, is larger.

Crime also is attributed to careless hiring practices.

Frazier said five employees were wanted by police. And personnel director Lorraine Mule said revisions in the hospital's employment application forms have made it easier for persons with arrest records to get hired.

"The forms have been toned down by the Civil Service Commission so that persons only have to answer if they have a felony conviction," she also said the policy of fingerprinting employees has been discontinued.

Charity, a sprawling complex of five buildings connected with tentacle-like passageways, has long been embroiled in politics.

An unpublished state police report in 1973 said information indicated a large architectural firm landed some fat contracts for the hospital after contributing to the campaign of ex-Gov. John McKeithen. It also said over $500,000 was paid in architectural fees for a laundry-parking facility that was never built.

Payroll fraud involving federal money is being investigated by the U.S. attorney's office.

Charity's unwieldy inventory system, which misplaced 50 air conditioners, medical equipment and a diving board, also is under attack by officials.

"Our biggest problem is we don't know what they're stealing because we don't know what we've got," said Paul Hayes, of the state Commissioner of Administration's office.

Most supplies are stored in the hospital's huge warehouse where sanitary conditions were labeled deplorable by health inspectors.

There are 67 drug stations with stocks valued at $800,000 scattered through the hospital, each with its own record system. Inspectors said they found prescription drugs lying in the open, unguarded. One of them pocketed a bottle of penicillin tablets. It was never missed.

Finally, officials suspect drug salesmen have walked into Charity, written their own orders and then filled them.

Despite the probe, which is expected to conclude soon, officials said medical services have not been impaired.

Native Writer Mari Sandoz Honored By Chadron State

By RON SPEER

Chadron — Mari Sandoz, the Sandhills girl who became an internationally recognized writer, was posthumously awarded the 1975 Distinguished Award Sunday by Chadron State College.

Relatives and friends who gathered for the occasion, a highlight of commencement day activities, agreed that although Miss Sandoz was noted for her caustic comments on social functions, she would have enjoyed it.

Mrs. Caroline Pifer, a younger sister, told a luncheon gathering that "Mari would be pleased to be honored near her home place. It's always something special to be recognized at home — because she was better known in New York City than she was in Nebraska."

Died In 1966

Miss Sandoz would have been 79 years old Sunday. She died in 1966.

She is best known in this area for her 1935 book "Old Jules," the story of her father's days as a settler along the Niobrara River south of Rushville.

She also wrote "Crazy Horse," "Cheyenne Autumn," "The Buffalo Hunters," "The Cattleman" and "The Beaver Men" in addition to numerous other books and stories.

One of her other books, "Capital City," was a story critical of life in Lincoln, where she went to school as a special student at the University of Nebraska.

Really Unhappy?

At that luncheon, Mrs. Pifer was asked if her sister was really that unhappy with Nebraska's capital.

"I don't think she ever changed her mind about that," Mrs. Pifer replied.

In honoring Miss Sandoz at the commencement for 320 Chadron graduates, President Larry Tangeman said: "In recognition of her scholarship, research and writing; in admiration of her struggle to immortalize the history and spirit of our people; and in appreciation of her devotion to tolerance between the land and its creatures, the board of trustees . . . is proud to confer the 1975 Distinguished Service Award posthumously . . . upon Mari Susette Sandoz."

The award was accepted by another sister, Flora Sandoz. A brother James was also there, as were numerous Sandhills friends and one of Mari's teachers, Mrs. Marie Hare, 88, of Gordon.

"Fiercely Independent"

The commencement speaker, Ron Hull of Lincoln, an old friend of Miss Sandoz, said that

"she was fiercely independent and her dedication . . . resulted in a Sandhill girl going off and writing 'Old Jules' and 'Crazy Horse' and all of those other books."

Hull, a professor journalism at NU, told the graduates western Nebraska is a land "in which there is an iron core of strength that runs through the people."

The Chadron State College since 1968 has been honoring the Nebraska author through the Mari Sandoz Heritage Society. Sunday was also the day recognized across Nebraska as Mari Sandoz Day.

IRA Is Responsible For Killing Policeman

Londonderry, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Sunday for the shooting death of a 20-year-old police officer, heightening fears that the IRA's 13-week-old cease-fire may be near the breaking point.

Constable Paul Gary was shot in the back by a sniper Saturday while on foot patrol on Londonderry's city walls.

A statement from the Provisionals admitted the shooting, and said it was in retaliation for police and army raids on Roman Catholic homes in the city.

The British Press Association quoted intelligence sources as fearing the killing heralds a return to all-out violence. It said one reason is that young militants have become frustrated by lack of action, and another was that fund-raising in the United States had flagged since the cease-fire took Northern Ireland out of the headlines.

In Dublin, informed sources said Irish police have uncovered evidence suggesting a plan to kidnap a key government figure to use as a hostage to free IRA prisoners.

Fears of a plot to spring IRA sympathizer Dr. Bridget Rose Dugdale heightened after the removal Saturday of her 5-month-old baby son from Emerick prison where his mother is held.

Dr. Dugdale is serving nine years for her part in a multimillion-dollar art robbery and the hijacking of a helicopter near the Irish border last year.

Police have released few details of the suspected plot but sources said it was believed to involve a free-lance group working outside the disciplinary hold of the IRA.

The group is believed to have been behind last month's kidnapping of retired British Judge Sir Paget Bourke in Dublin last month, the sources said.

Security for a number of potential kidnap victims reportedly has been stepped up.

Anti-Castro Unit Claims Credit For Explosions

Washington (AP) — Responsibility for two small bombings in Washington early Saturday has been claimed by "El Alacran," apparently an anti-Castro Cuban organization.

A note, signed "El Alacran," which means the Scorpion, was slipped under the door of The Associated Press office on Sunday stating that it had "hit the Venezuelan and Mexican representations in Washington, also the Soviet Aeroflot."

The note said that "any Latin American government that recognizes the Castro regime is considered a traitor to the enslaved Cuban people."

But He's Not Good To Her

Cleveland, Ohio (AP) — A robber broke into the home of an 81-year-old woman Sunday then recognized the woman as one of his old schoolteachers, police said.

"You were always good to me," the thief said, kissing her tenderly on the cheek.

Then he and an accomplice fled with $210.

Acker Will Speak

Duane Acker will speak about "The University's Role in Economic Growth" at the Friday noon Kiwanis meeting at the Elks Club. Acker is leaving the post of vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln to become president of Kansas State University.

The agents, whose code names were Salt and Pepper, were pulled off the case after officials said their comments to newsmen had blown their cover. Salt and Pepper said inadequate security has led to much of the hospital's theft, which ranges from wheel chairs to $2,000 X-ray tubes.

"One security guard sold two lids (bags) of marijuana to my partner while I was watching," said Salt.

The men said they have seen guards help load stolen equipment into cars. Loose security, they said, also has permitted pimps to smuggle prostitutes onto the wards.

State police have taken over security operations at Charity, a move that drastically plugged the flow of stolen meat.

Some of the crime is blamed on the hospital's chronic overcrowding.

Director Lee Frazier said he has over 1,800 beds but has to put up to 30 patients a day on rollers in the corridors because there is no room in the wards. He said he could use 200 more nurses to care for the 1.3 million outpatient visits handled at the hospital every year.

Charity, founded in 1735 with money from a sailor's will, offers free service. Only Los Angeles County Hospital, with 2,100 beds, is larger.

Crime also is attributed to careless hiring practices.

Frazier said five employees were wanted by police. And personnel director Lorraine Mule said revisions in the hospital's employment application forms have made it easier for persons with arrest records to get hired.

"The forms have been toned down by the Civil Service Commission so that persons only have to answer if they have a felony conviction," she also said the policy of fingerprinting employees has been discontinued.

Charity, a sprawling complex of five buildings connected with tentacle-like passageways, has long been embroiled in politics.

An unpublished state police report in 1973 said information indicated a large architectural firm landed some fat contracts for the hospital after contributing to the campaign of ex-Gov. John McKeithen. It also said over $500,000 was paid in architectural fees for a laundry-parking facility that was never built.

Payroll fraud involving federal money is being investigated by the U.S. attorney's office.

Charity's unwieldy inventory system, which misplaced 50 air conditioners, medical equipment and a diving board, also is under attack by officials.

"Our biggest problem is we don't know what they're stealing because we don't know what we've got," said Paul Hayes, of the state Commissioner of Administration's office.

Most supplies are stored in the hospital's huge warehouse where sanitary conditions were labeled deplorable by health inspectors.

There are 67 drug stations with stocks valued at $800,000 scattered through the hospital, each with its own record system. Inspectors said they found prescription drugs lying in the open, unguarded. One of them pocketed a bottle of penicillin tablets. It was never missed.

Finally, officials suspect drug salesmen have walked into Charity, written their own orders and then filled them.

Despite the probe, which is expected to conclude soon, officials said medical services have not been impaired.

Sinatra Insults The Toronto Star

Toronto (AP) — Frank Sinatra interrupted his own show here by displaying a copy of the Toronto Star and telling the audience he has only two uses for newspapers — "to cover the bottom of my parrot's cage and train my dog on."

The Star said a Sinatra bodyguard had punched a freelance photographer on assignment for the newspaper.

Sinatra told the audience he would give the photographer $1 million if he could prove the singer was responsible.

Native Writer Mari Sandoz Honored By Chadron State

By RON SPEER

Chadron — Mari Sandoz, the Sandhills girl who became an internationally recognized writer, was posthumously awarded the 1975 Distinguished Award Sunday by Chadron State College.

Relatives and friends who gathered for the occasion, a highlight of commencement day activities, agreed that although Miss Sandoz was noted for her caustic comments on social functions, she would have enjoyed it.

Mrs. Caroline Pifer, a younger sister, told a luncheon gathering that "Mari would be pleased to be honored near her home place. It's always something special to be recognized at home — because she was better known in New York City than she was in Nebraska."

Died In 1966

Miss Sandoz would have been 79 years old Sunday. She died in 1966.

She is best known in this area for her 1935 book "Old Jules," the story of her father's days as a settler along the Niobrara River south of Rushville.

She also wrote "Crazy Horse," "Cheyenne Autumn," "The Buffalo Hunters," "The Cattleman" and "The Beaver Men" in addition to numerous other books and stories.

One of her other books, "Capital City," was a story critical of life in Lincoln, where she went to school as a special student at the University of Nebraska.

Really Unhappy?

At that luncheon, Mrs. Pifer was asked if her sister was really that unhappy with Nebraska's capital.

"I don't think she ever changed her mind about that," Mrs. Pifer replied.

In honoring Miss Sandoz at the commencement for 320 Chadron graduates, President Larry Tangeman said: "In recognition of her scholarship, research and writing, in admiration of her struggle to immortalize the history and spirit of our people; and in appreciation of her devotion to tolerance between the land and its creatures, the board of trustees . . . is proud to confer the 1975 Distinguished Service Award posthumously . . . upon Mari Susette Sandoz."

The award was accepted by another sister, Flora Sandoz. A brother James was also there, as were numerous Sandhills friends and one of Mari's teachers, Mrs. Marie Hare, 88, of Gordon.

'Fiercely Independent'

The commencement speaker, Ron Hull of Lincoln, an old friend of Miss Sandoz, said that

"she was fiercely independent and her dedication . . . resulted in a Sandhill girl going off and writing 'Old Jules' and 'Crazy Horse' and all of those other books."

Hull, a professor journalism at NU, told the graduates western Nebraska is a land "in which there is an iron core of strength that runs through the people."

The Chadron State College since 1968 has been honoring the Nebraska author through the Mari Sandoz Heritage Society. Sunday was also the day recognized across Nebraska as Mari Sandoz Day.

IRA Is Responsible For Killing Policeman

Londonderry, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Sunday for the shooting death of a 20-year-old police officer, heightening fears that the IRA's 13-week-old cease-fire may be near the breaking point.

Constable Paul Gary was shot in the back by a sniper Saturday while on foot patrol on Londonderry's city walls.

A statement from the Provisionals admitted the shooting, and said it was in retaliation for police and army raids on Roman Catholic homes in the city.

The British Press Association quoted intelligence sources as fearing the killing heralds a return to all-out violence.

It said one reason is that young militants have become frustrated by lack of action, and another was that fund-raising in the United States had flagged since the cease-fire took Northern Ireland out of the headlines.

In Dublin, informed sources

said Irish police have uncovered evidence suggesting a plan to kidnap a key government figure to use as a hostage to free IRA prisoners.

Fears of a plot to spring IRA sympathizer Dr. Bridget Rose Dugdale heightened after the removal Saturday of her 5-month-old baby son from Emmerick prison where his mother is held.

Dr. Dugdale is serving nine years for her part in a multimillion-dollar art robbery and the hijacking of a helicopter near the Irish border last year.

Police have released few details of the suspected plot but sources said it was believed to involve a free-lance group working outside the disciplinary hold of the IRA.

The group is believed to have been behind last month's kidnapping of retired British Judge Sir Paget Bourke in Dublin last month, the sources said.

Security for a number of potential kidnap victims reportedly has been stepped up.

Anti-Castro Unit Claims Credit For Explosions

Washington (AP) — Responsibility for two small bombings in Washington early Saturday has been claimed by "El Alacran," apparently an anti-Castro Cuban organization.

A note, signed "El Alacran," which means the Scorpion, was slipped under the door of The Associated Press office on Sunday stating that it had "hit the Venezuelan and Mexican representations in Washington, also the Soviet Aeroflot."

The note said that "any Latin American government that recognizes the Castro regime is considered a traitor to the enslaved Cuban people."

But He's Not Good To Her

Cleveland, Ohio (AP) — A robber broke into the home of an 81-year-old woman Sunday then recognized the woman as one of his old schoolteachers, police said.

"You were always good to me," the thief said, kissing her tenderly on the cheek.

Then he and an accomplice fled with $210.

Duane Acker will speak about "The University's Role in Economic Growth" at the Friday noon Kiwanis meeting at the Elks Club. Porter Aids Bullets Past Boston, 98-92

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Little Kevin Porter, the National Basketball Association's assist champion, went on a scoring binge in the final quarter Sunday to lead the Washington Bullets to a 98-92 victory over the Boston Celtics, clinching the Eastern Conference championship.

The defending NBA champion Celtics, who rallied from an 18-point deficit before Porter and his running mate at guard, Phil Chenier, blunted their comeback, dropped the best-of-seven series, four games to two.

The Bullets, reaching the NBA finals for only the second time in history, will play the championship round against either the Golden State Warriors or the Chicago Bulls Golden State won Sunday to tie the Western Conference series at 3-3.

Porter, a 5-foot-11 playmaker, scored 13 of his 21 points in the final quarter and Chenier added eight of his game-high 24 in the fourth period. Porter also had 11 assists, nine of them in the first half which ended with Washington ahead 55-40.

"They were gambling quite a bit," Porter said. "And when they do, you have to take it to the hoop. Hopefully, you draw a foul or they come after you and you can dish it off."

Elvin Hayes, normally Washington's high scorer, totaled 15 points and gave Porter credit for the victory.

"Kevin really took charge," Hayes said. "He's the real key to this ball club. He makes things happen and makes us go. He proved it today down the stretch. It was a fine effort by the little fellow."

John Havlicek, the Boston captain who scored 19 points in a losing effort, cited his team's 40 per cent shooting average as the key factor in the series.

"We outrebounded them, took more shots and had more assists," Havlicek said. "But the big thing was we couldn't put the ball in the basket. That really cost us."

"Their defense had a lot to do with it, but we weren't that effective in our offense as we have been in the past."

Porter, who sometimes hurts Washington by incurring early fouls, stayed out of trouble until late in the game. It was especially important because reserve guard Jimmy Jones is out with a knee injury and Mike Riordan, a swing man who also plays guard, was sidelined with a thigh injury in the second half.

But the Celtics rallied behind Dave Cowens and Jo Jo White to pull within 73-66 at the end of the third period. Cowens scored 12 points during the quarter and White, held to two points at halftime, poured in eight more.

Boston trailed 79-72 early in the fourth quarter before Porter, who had 11 assists, scored on a three-point play to put Washington ahead, 82-72 with seven minutes remaining in the nationally televised game.

Broken Bow May Host Quarter Horse Meeting

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

If you enjoy quarter horse racing, you may have your own meet this August and September in Broken Bow.

The Nebraska Quarter Horse Racing Association will ask approval to run a 10-day quarter horse meet at the Custer County Fairgrounds in Broken Bow this summer at a special meeting of the Nebraska State Racing Commission on May 20 in Omaha.

The meet, if approved by the three-man Commission, would feature between eight and 10 races each day with pari-mutuel wagering supervised by the American Totalisator Company — the same company that handles thoroughbred racing at the five Nebraska tracks.

"I think we've said for years that Nebraska is a big quarter horse state and we will do anything to help them," said Harry Farnham of Omaha, chairman of the Nebraska State Racing Commission.

"They should have a meet and we certainly think there's enough room for both (quarter and thoroughbreds) in Nebraska," he added. "I think it's (Broken Bow) far enough away so that it wouldn't hurt the thoroughbred meet."

Farnham said quarter horse races have been held at Burwell for years without pari-mutuel wagering. He noted that Alliance and Mitchell, which no longer operate horse meetings, held quarter horse races with pari-mutuel wagering several years ago.

Jim Amerine, of Omaha, president of the Nebraska Quarter Horse Racing Association, said the Broken Bow track desires night racing starting at about 7 p.m. The dates his group will request at the May 20 meeting include Aug. 21-22-23, 28-29-30 and Sept. 1, 4-5-6.

Although the Nebraska thoroughbred tracks run during the day, the Commission could authorize night racing. According to rule 3.04 of the Nebraska Rules of Racing, "each association shall conduct horse racing only between the hours of noon and sun-down unless otherwise specifically authorized by the Commission."

"We're not sure how many races we will run since we've asked a company to put in 400 stalls and we don't know how many will be put in," he said.

"There's a lot of interest in quarter horses in Nebraska."

"This year, we're hoping for close to a $20,000 Futurity and next year we hope to go over $50,000. Everyone is looking for a good track to run their quarter horses," Amerine said.

He said area horsemen have become increasingly dissatisfied with quarter horse racing at Park Jefferson in Jefferson, S.D. That is the only track (besides Denver) in the immediate area offering pari-mutuel quarter horse racing.

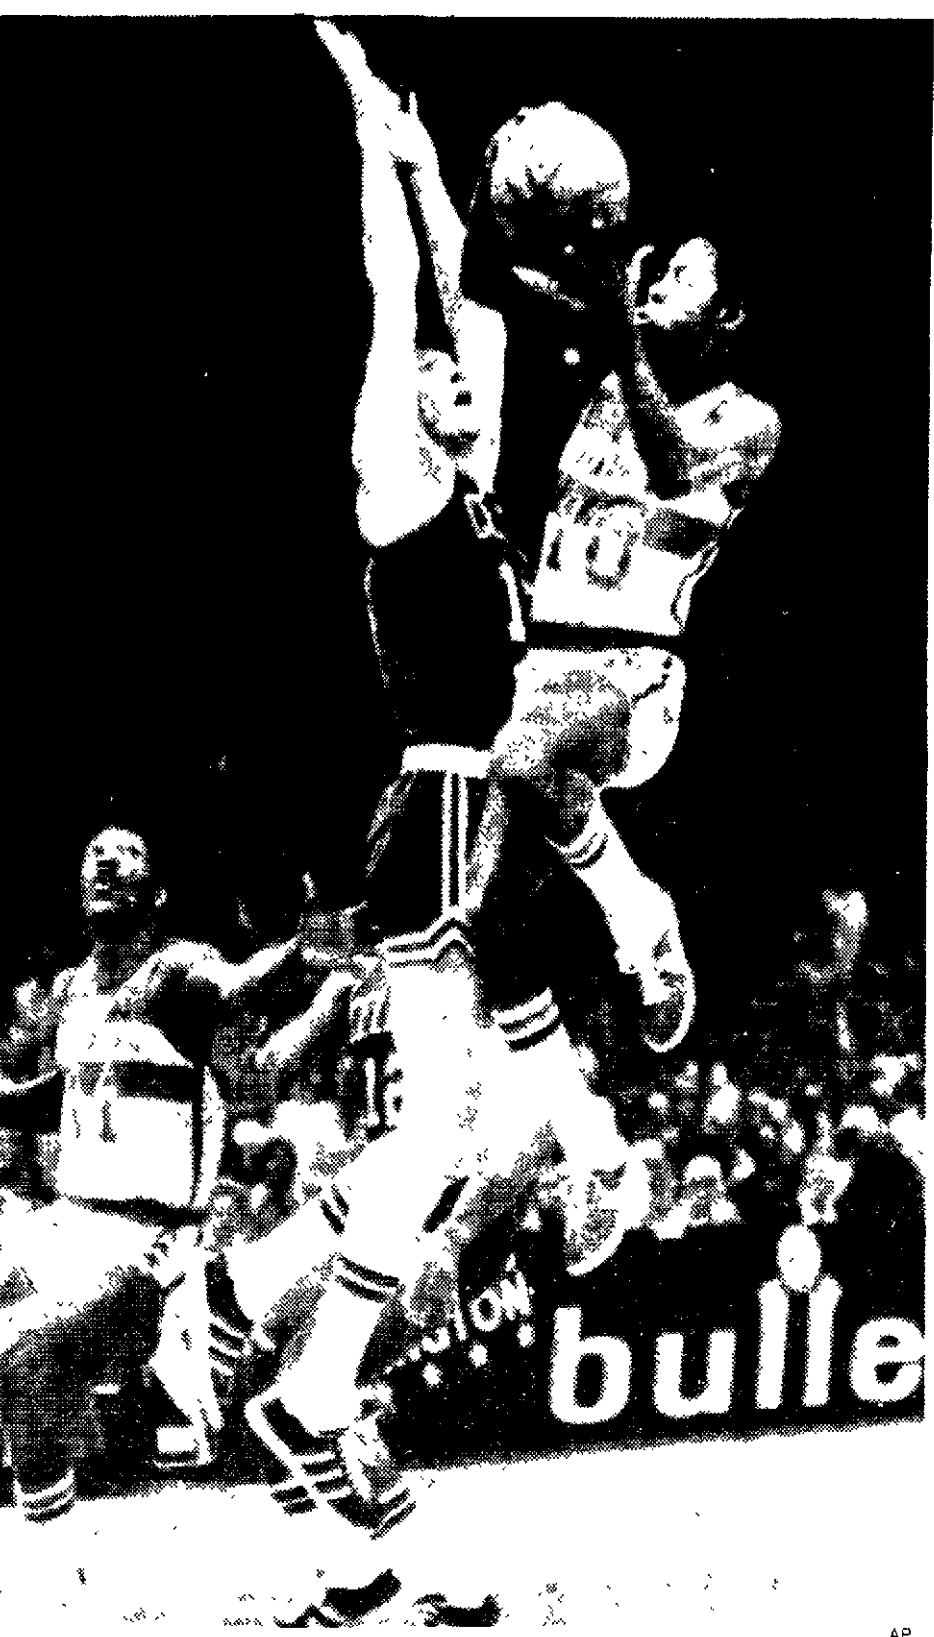

"It may surprise some people, but I'd guess that we could do nearly $1 million each weekend in pari-mutuel handle," he predicted. "They run a 10-day meet at Holly, Colo., which is completely isolated and they averaged $45,000 per day."

"Look at the towns close to here — Kearney, Grand Island, Lexington, Hastings. There's a lot of people there and that will help. It's about 189 miles from Omaha and a little closer to Lincoln, so it's not too far away."

Amerine said it has not been determined what purse structure the track will offer this summer. He added that next year the track would like to run in June and July.

"We'd like to run a separate meet at Atokad (in South Sioux City) for quarter horses," Amerine said. "But they want to know more about it. I'm sure a spring quarterhorse or a fall meet would really do well up there. There's no place for quarterhorses to run then except at Denver."

"I really don't know how long the races would take. Down in Kansas at tracks at Emporia and Eureka, they run 20 races an afternoon, but, of course, there's no pari-mutuel betting there," he said. "We'd have to see what happens the first year. It would all depend on our crowds, how many machines (pari-mutuel machines) and how many races we have."

Washington's Kevin Porter (10) goes over Boston's John Havlicek for two points in Sunday's game between the two clubs. Washington won, 98-92.

Golden State Topples Bulls

CHICAGO (UPI)—Golden State Warriors Coach Al Attles knew the combination for his team to beat the Chicago Bulls.

"Every time we outrebound them and make fewer mistakes," he said, "we win. And that's the way it's been—when they outrebound us, they make fewer mistakes and they win. It just shows these teams are a little more even than people think."

Sunday the Warriors, even though playing away from home, did just what the coach wanted. They outrebounded the Bulls, they made fewer mistakes and of course they had gunner Rick Barry. So they won, 86-72.

The victory on regional television squared the best-of-seven between the two teams for the National Basketball Association's Western Conference championship at three wins apiece and as Attles said, "It's down to one game at our place now." The two teams meet on national television Wednesday night on the Warriors court.

"We just went out there to try not to make mistakes," Attles said, "and I told them 'If you miss a shot, don't get discouraged.' They got up by nine, but we were able to get back and keep our concentration."

Barry, hitting a game high 36 points, also had seven steals, three assists and one blocked shot.

"We played a heck of a job on defense," Barry said, "and we rebounded well. I think the secret was defense. We made a few adjustments and they worked very well, and the way we were working on the boards, we didn't give them many second or third chances."

"We started playing our game in the second and third quarters and they had to play catchup instead of us. But it means nothing unless we go out there and play good basketball in the next one. There's no doubt in my mind, if we do, we can beat this team," Barry said.

The victor of the Bulls-Warriors contest Wednesday goes on to meet the Washington Bullets in the league's finals.

The Warriors' victory squared the best-of-seven series at three games apiece and forced a decisive seventh game on the Warriors' court Wednesday night. The victor will advance to the league finals against the Washington Bullets.

The win returned the home court advantage in the series to the Warriors, who lost at home Thursday night when the Bulls won for only the third time in 29 playoff road games to take a 3-2 lead in the series.

The Warriors fell behind by nine points in the first quarter Sunday as the Bulls hit 55 per cent from the field to seize a 25-18 lead. Thereafter, Golden State came to life and the Bulls turned cold.

The Warriors outscored the Bulls by 15 points in the second period to grab a 46-38 lead at the half and the Bulls never came closer than five points the rest of the way, trailing most of the time by 10 or more points.

Determined Islanders Spill Philadelphia, 2-1

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Miracles, anyone? Not for Gerry Hart. The New York Islanders defenseman doesn't believe in them.

"You have to make things happen yourself," said the squat blueliner, who made the theory work by scoring the goal that gave his determined teammates a 2-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers and forced a seventh game of the National Hockey League's semifinal playoff series.

"We've been making things happen all year long," noted Hart, who has helped the Islanders come from three-game deficits twice in Stanley Cup play this season. "Even in life, nothing is given to you. You have to do things on your own."

That's what Hart did. The Islanders were pouring pressure on Flyer goaltender Bernie Parent early in the third period and the Philadelphia defense simply could not clear the puck from its zone. The score was tied 1-1, and it was time for Hart to take matters into his own hands.

A New York shot hit Parent's stick and bounced to Hart off the skates of Flyer right wing Don Saleski. "It was still rolling when I hit it," Hart said. "All I wanted to do was shoot on net."

He did better. He scored his second goal of the playoffs at 3:42 of the period for the lead he helped protect until the Islanders had a 3-3 tie in the best-of-seven series.

"A one-goal lead can be protected in the playoffs," said New York defenseman Denis Potvin, who also scored. Then he summed up the almost incredible determination his teammates have displayed in twice peeling their backs off the wall of playoff extinction.

He motioned to the blackboard in the Islander dressing room. "When we were down 0-3, there was an element of doubt that we could come back," Potvin said. "But we looked at the blackboard and it said, 'The magic number is four.'"

"If you look at it now, it says, 'The magic number is one.'"

That one is Tuesday night at Philadelphia's Spectrum, and it will decide if the Islanders' miracle will continue.

The winner of that game will advance to the Stanley Cup final against the Buffalo Sabres.

The puck skimmed to Jude Drouin on the right point. Drouin shoveled the disc to Potvin, whose 30-foot wrist shot beat Parent to the short side and tied the score 1-1.

Evans, Lively. Produce Win

Sunland Park, N.M. (AP) — Two Ak-Sar-Ben campaigners combined to win the $212,522 Riley Allison Futurity here Sunday at Sunland Park.

Owner B. Raymond Evans of Tulsa, Tex., had jockey John Lively ride Admiral's Blade to victory in the 5-furlong race. The winner's share was worth $101,261 and boosted the horse's career winnings to $151,845.

Evans has horses running at Ak-Sar-Ben while Lively is bidding for his fifth straight Ak-Sar-Ben riding title.

Admiral's Blade, who was clocked in :57 4-5; returned $6.60, $3.00 and $3.40. Klen Litso placed for $3.60 and $3.40 while Aunt Ruby showed for $5.20.

Opperman To Try Indy 500 Again

By ART SEAMAN
Special To The Star

Indianapolis, Ind. — Sunday marked the second day of time trials for the Indy 500.

On the track for the first time was Jan Opperman of Beaver Crossing. Opperman showed up at the Speedway on Thursday and got a ride in car no. 46 the Thermo-King Special. He's driving for the racing team of Fred Gerhardt. The car is an Eagle with an Offenhauser engine.

Opperman is still long-haired and still considers himself "friendly with Jesus, cause he still is full tilt in my life." Last year Opperman went to the barber twice to get his hair cut short enough to win the approval of car owner Parnelli Jones.

He admits that he probably can't win the race, but said, "I need more practice in the rear engine cars. I only ran 84 laps here last year and I went out on the first lap at Pocono. If I can get the practice laps in and run in the race I can come back later and win it."

"Driving a rear engine car is a lot different from running a sprint car, because you lay down in the middle of the car at the pivot point and it's harder to tell when you are losing it. You drive the car the whole way. Indy cars are very stable and you can look at your gauges on the straight, but you really concentrate on the corners."

Opperman considers himself semi-retired from racing and isn't particularly awed by Indy. "I don't feel like I've made it now that I'm here. The only time you can feel that you have it made is when you see the checkered flag. Then there's always another race coming up."

"I'm pleased to be driving for Fred Gerhardt. They're a lot more relaxed and not so worried about image. It's a real good crew and even though it is a low budget team and we have to worry about blowing engines, there isn't the pressure that I had last year."

Opperman will be a teammate of Gary Bettenhausen who qualified car 46 yesterday.

"We only have one pit crew so it means we'll have to stagger pit stops, but that usually is no big problem. Gary has been real helpful to me in getting acquainted with the car. The big thing for me to do is get the car qualified. I'm sure I can get it up to 183 and maybe try to qualify it today or next weekend."

After his practice laps, he said the car was running well and, "the only reason I'm not running any faster is that I have problems in my head. The car is fully capable of running 184. I'm still getting used to it, but I'll be ready for race day."

Bettenhausen said, "Jan is a very capable driver. He probably is one of the best drivers around and once he gets to the point where he is comfortable with the car he should be able to run real well."

In other action at the Speedway, Wally Dallenbach qualified in the 23rd position and George Snider qualified 24th leaving just nine positions to be filled in the field.

Later Sunday, Sam Sessions, rookie Sheldon Kinser, Roger McCluskey and Bob Harkey completed qualification runs, leaving five open spots in the 33-car field.

Another 17 machines capable of making high-speed runs are expected out next Saturday and Sunday to compete for starting positions.

Ashe Hits Borg For WCT Title

DALLAS (AP) — America's Arthur Ashe swept aside Sweden's teen-age star Bjorn Borg Sunday in the finals of the World Championship of Tennis singles but the match may very well have been decided Friday night.

A drained Borg, who was beaten 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-0 by the bullet-serving Ashe, said, "I just gave so much in the semifinals against Rod Laver that I could give nothing in the finals."

It took Borg five sets and four hours to defeat Australia's Laver in the semifinals Friday night and Borg apparently never recovered.

The slump-shouldered idol of millions of teen-age girls said, "I just went out and gave everything against Laver, mentally and physically. In the last set I was very tired and it was just ace after ace."

An exuberant Ashe, who at 31 is 13 years older than his opponent, said, "I decided to run after every ball no matter whether the pain was killing me."

Ashe, who has been criticized for his play in vital clutch matches said, "I think I proved I don't choke. I've been on three Davis Cup winners, I've won two Grand Slam events and now the WCT. I think that answers my critics."

Ashe said he almost knew he was going to win this $100,000 tournament and its $50,000 first prize after a gypsy read his palm in Stockholm two weeks ago.

"I know it sounds silly but she told me I would win this week. 'You will cry a lot about something before the month is over,' she said."

Ashe cried on the podium while receiving his championship trophy.

He said he had no plans to meet freelance tennis star Jimmy Connors in a head-to-head match.

"The idea is really not very appealing to me," Ashe said.

Borg, who won $20,000 second place money, said, "Arthur's serve was just tremendous in the last two sets. He won nine games in a row off me and there just seemed to be nothing I could do about it. But I will be back."

The top-seeded Ashe stumbled at the start against his 18-year-old opponent, making 23 errors in the first set. Ashe flubbed a forehand for the set point.

The 31-year-old Ashe charged back to take command against the acrobatic Swede in a second set that had five service breaks Borg suffered a fatal foot fault in the decisive 10th game.

Ashe, his smoking first serve on target in the third set, began to unnerv his younger foe. Borg's first serve suddenly deserted him and Ashe took the third set because of his attacks on the Swede's weak second serve.

A crowd of 9,000 fans in Moody Coliseum watched Ashe destroy Borg in the fourth set, breaking his serve three times to win in six straight games.

Ashe was devastating at the finish, winning the last nine games.

Ashe had three consecutive eces while serving in the fifth game of the final set, giving him 10 aces for the match which lasted two hours and 15 minutes.

Ashe, besides taking down the first prize check, also earned an expensive diamond ring, a diamond bracelet for his mother, a Cadillac and a $1,000 wardrobe.

Borg said immediately after the nationally televised match at courtside "Arthur just played too good for me. I am still young and have many years left. I will be back."

Porter Aids Bullets Past Boston, 98-92

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Little Kevin Porter, the National Basketball Association's assist champion, went on a scoring binge in the final quarter Sunday to lead the Washington Bullets to a 98-92 victory over the Boston Celtics, clinching the Eastern Conference championship.

The defending NBA champion Celtics, who rallied from an 18-point deficit before Porter and his running mate at guard, Phil Chenier, blunted their comeback, dropped the best-of-seven series, four games to two.

The Bullets, reaching the NBA finals for only the second time in history, will play the championship round against either the Golden State Warriors or the Chicago Bulls. Golden State won Sunday to tie the Western Conference series at 3-3.

Porter, a 5-foot-11 playmaker, scored 13 of his 21 points in the final quarter and Chenier added eight of his game-high 24 in the fourth period. Porter also had 11 assists, nine of them in the first half which ended with Washington ahead 55-40.

"They were gambling quite a bit," Porter said. "And when they do, you have to take it to the hoop. Hopefully, you draw a foul or they come after you and you can dish it off."

Elvin Hayes, normally Washington's high scorer, totaled 15 points and gave Porter credit for the victory.

"Kevin really took charge," Hayes said. "He's the real key to this ball club. He makes things happen and makes us go. He proved it today down the stretch. It was a fine effort by the little fellow."

John Havlicek, the Boston captain who scored 19 points in a losing effort, cited his team's 40 per cent shooting average as the key factor in the series.

"We outrebounded them, took more shots and had more assists," Havlicek said. "But the big thing was we couldn't put the ball in the basket. That really cost us."

"Their defense had a lot to do with it, but we weren't that effective in our offense as we have been in the past."

Porter, who sometimes hurts Washington by incurring early fouls, stayed out of trouble until late in the game. It was especially important because reserve guard Jimmy Jones is out with a knee injury and Mike Riordan, a swing man who also plays guard, was sidelined with a thigh injury in the second half.

But the Celtics rallied behind Dave Cowens and Jo Jo White to pull within 73-66 at the end of the third period. Cowens scored 12 points during the quarter and White, held to two points at halftime, poured in eight more.

Boston trailed 79-72 early in the fourth quarter before Porter, who had 11 assists, scored on a three-point play to put Washington ahead 82-72 with seven minutes remaining in the nationally televised game.

The Celtics, refusing to give up, pulled to within 92-86 late in the contest, before three consecutive baskets by Porter sealed their doom. The two guards scored 21 of Washington's 25 fourth-quarter points.

Cowens topped Boston with 23 points and both teams with 21 rebounds, but the big redhead was held scoreless in the final quarter. John Havlicek finished with 19 points and White, a chief cog in the Boston attack during the second half, had 18.

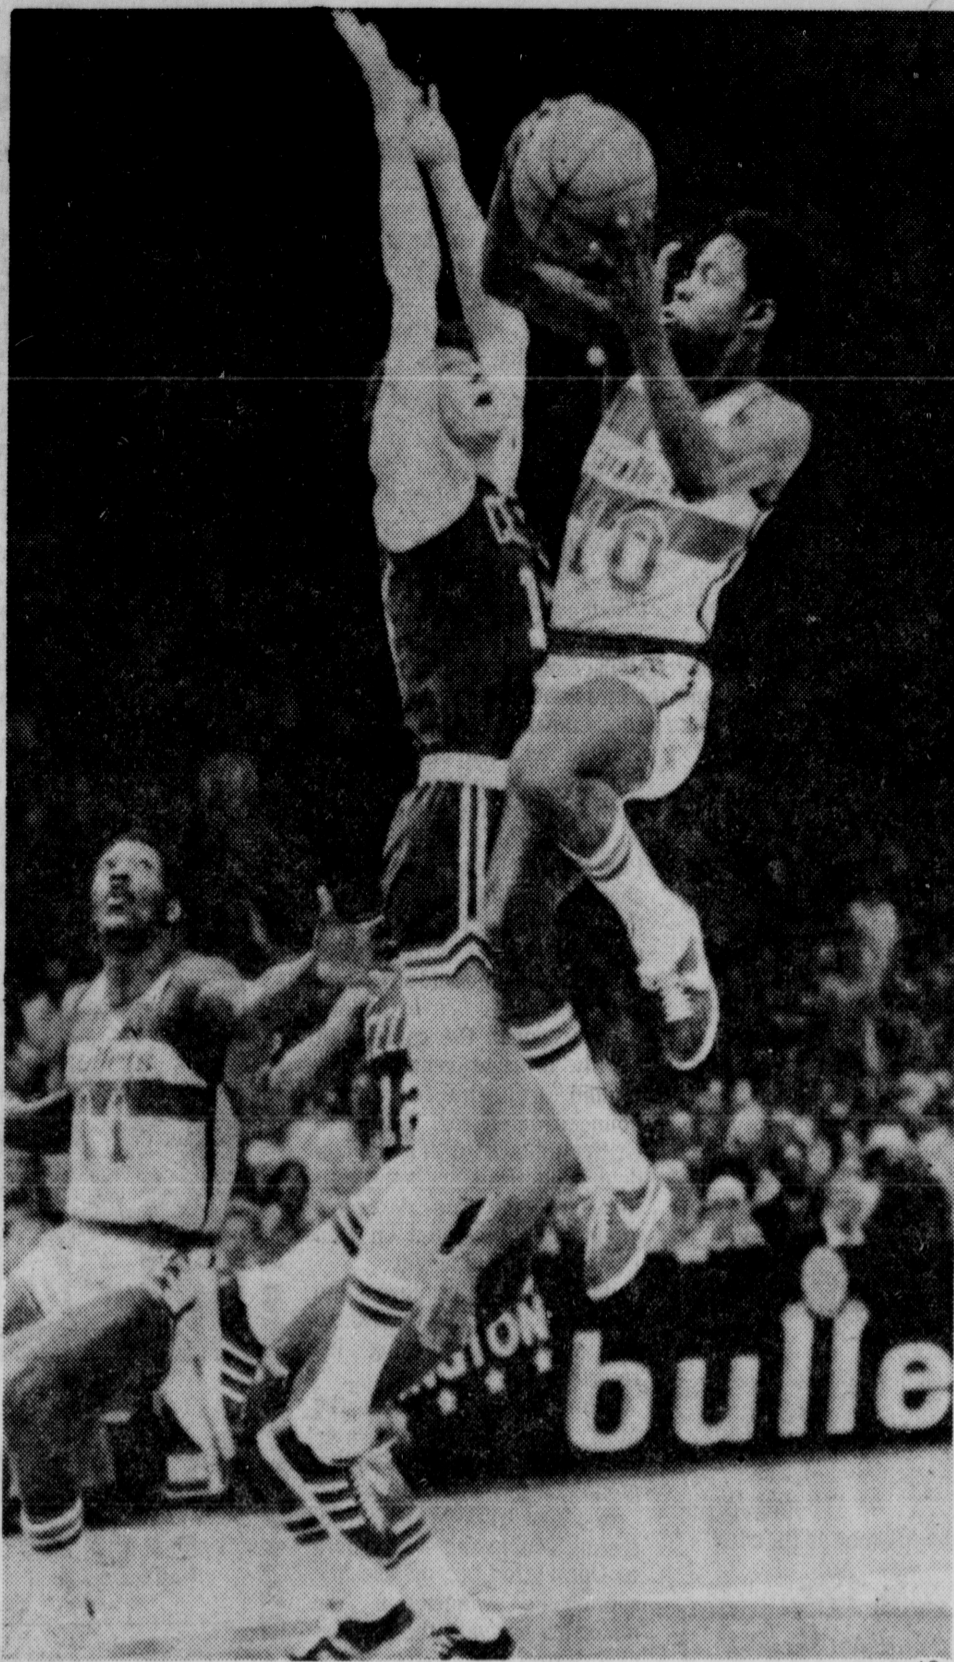

Elvin Hayes, usually Washington's high scorer, managed only one point after halftime and finished with 15, plus 11 rebounds. Wes Unseld had 17 rebounds and 10 points for the Bullets.

Washington's Mike Riordan, in a shooting slump throughout the playoffs, scored all of his 10 points in the first half and sat out most of the second half after suffering a thigh injury. His substitute, Nick Weatherspoon, contributed 15 points.

The Celtics, held to a 40 per cent shooting average through the first five games, fell behind 55-40 in the first half while hitting only 34 per cent. White was 1-for-7 during that stretch.

Washington has compiled a 42-6 record at home this season, and has won six straight at the Capital Center since losing to the Buffalo Braves in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Determined Islanders Spill Philadelphia, 2-1

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Miracles, anyone? Not for Gerry Hart. The New York Islander defenseman doesn't believe in them.

"You have to make things happen yourself," said the squat blueliner, who made the theory work by scoring the goal that gave his determined teammates a 2-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers and forced a seventh game of the National Hockey League's semifinal playoff series.

"We've been making things happen all year long," noted Hart, who has helped the Islanders come from three-game deficits twice in Stanley Cup play this season. "Even in life, nothing is given to you. You have to do things on your own."

That's what Hart did. The Islanders were pouring pressure on Flyer goaltender Bernie Parent early in the third period and the Philadelphia defense simply could not clear the puck from its zone. The score was tied 1-1, and it was time for Hart to take matters into his own hands.

A New York shot hit Parent's stick and bounced to Hart off the skates of Flyer right wing Don Saleski. "It was still rolling when I hit it," Hart said. "All I wanted to do was shoot on net."

He did better. He scored his second goal of the playoffs at 3:42 of the period for the lead he helped protect until the Islanders had a 3-3 tie in the best-of-seven series.

"A one-goal lead can be protected in the playoffs," said New York defenseman Denis Potvin, who also scored. Then he summed up the almost incredible determination his teammates have displayed in twice peeling their backs off the wall of playoff extinction.

He motioned to the blackboard in the Islander dressing room. "When we were down 0-3, there was an element of doubt that we could come back," Potvin said. "But we looked at the blackboard and it said, 'The magic number is four.'

"If you look at it now, it says, 'The magic number is one.'"

That one is Tuesday night at Philadelphia's Spectrum, and it will decide if the Islanders' miracle will continue.

The winner of that game will advance to the Stanley Cup final against the Buffalo Sabres.

The puck skimmed to Jude Drouin on the right point. Drouin shoveled the disc to Potvin, whose 30-foot wrist shot beat Parent to the short side and tied the score 1-1.

Evans, Lively Produce Win

Sunland Park, N.M. (AP) — Two Ak-Sar-Ben campaigners combined to win the $212,522 Riley Allison Futurity here Sunday at Sunland Park.

Owner B. Raymond Evans of Tulsa, Tex., had jockey John Lively ride Admiral's Blade to victory in the 5-furlong race. The winner's share was worth $101,261 and boosted the horse's career winnings to $151,845.

Evans has horses running at Ak-Sar-Ben while Lively is bidding for his fifth straight Ak-Sar-Ben riding title.

Admiral's Blade, who was clocked in :57 4-5; returned $6.60, $3.00 and $3.40. Klen Litso placed for $3.60 and $3.40 while Aunt Ruby showed for $5.20.

Golden State Topples Bulls

CHICAGO (UPI)—Golden State Warriors Coach Al Attles knew the combination for his team to beat the Chicago Bulls.

"Every time we rebounded them and make fewer mistakes," he said, "we win. And that's the way it's been—when they rebounded us, they make fewer mistakes and they win. It just shows these teams are a little more even than people think."

Sunday the Warriors, even though playing away from home, did just what the coach wanted. They outrebounded the Bulls, they made fewer mistakes and of course they had gunner Rick Barry. So they won, 86-72.

The victory on regional television squared the best-of-seven between the two teams for the National Basketball Association's Western Conference championship at three wins apiece and as Attles said, "It's down to one game at our place now." The two teams met on national television Wednesday night on the Warriors court.

"We just went out there to try not to make mistakes," Attles said, "and I told them 'If you miss a shot, don't get discouraged.' They got up by nine, but we were able to get back and keep our concentration."

Barry, hitting a game high 36 points, also had seven steals, three assists and one blocked shot.

"We played a heck of a job on defense," Barry said, "and we rebounded well. I think the secret was defense. We made a few adjustments and they worked very well, and the way we were working on the boards, we didn't give them many second or third chances."

"We started playing our game in the second and third quarters and they had to play catchup instead of us. But it means nothing unless we go out there and play good basketball in the next one. There's no doubt in my mind, if we do, we can beat this team," Barry said.

The victor of the Bulls-Warriors contest Wednesday goes on to meet the Washington Bullets in the league's finals.

The Warriors' victory squared the best-of-seven series at three games apiece and forced a decisive seventh game on the Warriors' court Wednesday night. The victor will advance to the league finals against the Washington Bullets.

The win returned the home court advantage in the series to the Warriors, who lost at home Thursday night when the Bulls won for only the third time in 29 playoff road games to take a 3-2 lead in the series.

The Warriors fell behind by nine points in the first quarter Sunday as the Bulls hit 55 per cent from the field to seize a 25-18 lead. Thereafter, Golden State came to life and the Bulls turned cold.

The Warriors outscored the Bulls by 15 points in the second period to grab a 46-38 lead at the half and the Bulls never came closer than five points the rest of the way, trailing most of the time by 10 or more points.

Opperman To Try Indy 500 Again

By ART SEAMAN
Special To The Star

Indianapolis, Ind. — Sunday marked the second day of time trials for the Indy 500.

On the track for the first time was Jan Opperman of Beaver Crossing. Opperman showed up at the Speedway on Thursday and got a ride in car no. 46 the Thermo-King Special. He's driving for the racing team of Fred Gerhardt. The car is an Eagle with an Offenhauser engine.

Opperman is still long-haired and still considers himself "friendly with Jesus, cause he still is full tilt in my life." Last year Opperman went to the barber twice to get his hair cut short enough to win the approval of car owner Parnelli Jones.

He admits that he probably can't win the race, but said, "I need more practice in the rear engine cars. I only ran 84 laps here last year and I went out on the first lap at Pocono. If I can get the practice laps in and run in the race I can come back later and win it."

"Driving a rear engine car is a lot different from running a sprint car, because you lay down in the middle of the car at the pivot point and it's harder to tell when you are losing it. You drive the car the whole way. Indy cars are very stable and you can look at your gauges on the straight, but you really concentrate on the corners."

Opperman considers himself semi-retired from racing and isn't particularly awed by Indy. "I don't feel like I've made it now that I'm here. The only time you can feel that you have it made is when you see the checkered flag. Then there's always another race coming up."

"I'm pleased to be driving for Fred Gerhardt. They're a lot more relaxed and not so worried about image. It's a real good crew and even though it is a low budget team and we have to worry about blowing engines, there isn't the pressure that I had last year."

Opperman will be a teammate of Gary Bettenhausen who qualified car no. 46 yesterday.

"We only have one pit crew so it means we'll have to stagger pit stops, but that usually is no big problem. Gary has been real helpful to me in getting acquainted with the car. The big thing for me to do is get the car qualified. I'm sure I can get it up to 183 and maybe try to qualify it today or next weekend."

After his practice laps, he said the car was running well and, "the only reason I'm not running any faster is that I have problems in my head. The car is fully capable of running 184. I'm still getting used to it, but I'll be ready for race day."

Bettenhausen said, "Jan is a very capable driver. He probably is one of the best drivers around and once he gets to the point where he is comfortable with the car he should be able to run real well."

In other action at the Speedway, Wally Dallenbach qualified in the 23rd position and George Snider qualified 24th leaving just nine positions to be filled in the field.

Later Sunday, Sam Sessions, rookie Sheldon Kinser, Roger McCluskey and Bob Harkey completed qualification runs, leaving five open spots in the 33-car field.

Another 17 machines capable of making high-speed runs are expected out next Saturday and Sunday to compete for starting positions.

Ashe Hits Borg For WCT Title

DALLAS (AP) — America's Arthur Ashe swept aside Sweden's teen-age star Bjorn Borg Sunday in the finals of the World Championship of Tennis singles but the match may very well have been decided Friday night.

A drained Borg, who was beaten 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-0 by the bullet-serving Ashe, said, "I just gave so much in the semifinals against Rod Laver that I could give nothing in the finals."

It took Borg five sets and four hours to defeat Australia's Laver in the semifinals Friday night and Borg apparently never recovered.

The slump-shouldered idol of millions of teen-age girls said, "I just went out and gave everything against Laver, mentally and physically. In the last set I was very tired and it was just ace after ace."

An exuberant Ashe, who at 31 is 13 years older than his opponent, said, "I decided to run after every ball no matter whether the pain was killing me."

Ashe, who has been criticized for his play in vital clutch matches said, "I think I proved I don't choke. I've been on three Davis Cup winners, I've won two Grand Slam events and now the WCT. I think that answers my critics."

Ashe said he almost knew he was going to win this $100,000 tournament and its $50,000 first prize after a gypsy read his palm in Stockholm two weeks ago.

"I know it sounds silly but she told me I would win this week. 'You will cry a lot about something before the month is over,' she said."

Ashe cried on the podium while receiving his championship trophy.

He said he had no plans to meet freelance tennis star Jimmy Connors in a head-to-head match.

"The idea is really not very appealing to me," Ashe said.

Borg, who won $20,000 second place money, said, "Arthur's serve was just tremendous in the last two sets. He won nine games in a row off me and there just seemed to be nothing I could do about it. But I will be back."

The top-seeded Ashe stumbled at the start against his 18-year-old opponent, making 23 errors in the first set. Ashe flubbed a forehand for the set point.

The 31-year-old Ashe charged back to take command against the acrobatic Swede in a second set that had five service breaks. Borg suffered a fatal foot fault in the decisive 10th game.

Ashe, his smoking first serve on target in the third set, began to unnerv his younger foe. Borg's first serve suddenly deserted him and Ashe took the third set because of his attacks on the Swede's weak second serve.

A crowd of 9,000 fans in Moody Coliseum watched Ashe destroy Borg in the fourth set, breaking his serve three times to win in six straight games.

Ashe was devastating at the finish, winning the last nine games.

Ashe had three consecutive eces while serving in the fifth game of the final set, giving him 10 aces for the match which lasted two hours and 15 minutes.

Ashe, besides taking down the first prize check, also earned an expensive diamond ring, a diamond bracelet for his mother, a Cadillac and a $1,000 wardrobe.

Borg said immediately after the nationally televised match at courtside "Arthur just played too good for me. I am still young and have many years left. I will be back."

St. Louis Cardinals' Mike Tyson is upset by San Francisco's Bobby Murcer as he tries to compete a double play in the first inning.

Rains Delay Nelson Meet Until Monday

DALLAS (UPI) — A Spring thunderstorm whipped by strong winds Sunday washed out the championship round of the $175,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

PGA officials suspended play at 12:55 p.m. EDT with 46 players on the course. The lead group of Monty Kaser and Butch Baird were through 15 holes.

Bruce Crampton, Bob Eastwood and Rod Funseth, tied for the lead at 10 under par 203, were not on the course.

The washout was the first since the third round of the Hawaiian Open. PGA officials reset the final round for Monday at the 6,983-yard Preston Trails course. "It is just too wet," PGA tournament supervisor Wade Cagle said. "The greens are under water. Due to the late hour, there was no way we could get around to play under darkness."

Oklahoma Seeks 4th

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Oklahoma goes after its fourth straight Big Eight Conference baseball title Tuesday.

The Sooners are hosts to second-place Nebraska in the first two games of a three-game series and need only one victory to wrap it all up. The third game of the series is Wednesday.

If the Sooners lose all three games, Nebraska would win the championship. At present, Oklahoma is 12-3 and the Huskers 7-5. A three-game sweep by the Huskers would give the two clubs identical win-loss percentages but Nebraska would win the crown for taking the Oklahoma series.

"We'll try to play Nebraska one game at a time," says Sooner Coach Enos Semore. "I tell you, Nebraska is the type of club that could sweep all three games if we don't play well."

The only other unfinished conference business is a three-game series that finds Oklahoma State at Missouri Monday and Tuesday. If the Huskers get beat and O-State wins, the Cowboys could jump all the way into second place.

Seaver Boosts Mets Over Reds

By United Press International
Tom Seaver came back from a 400-foot home run by Pete Rose and a 2-0 deficit in the first inning to pitch the New York Mets to a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds Sunday, ending the Mets' six-game losing streak.

Mike Phillips scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning on Rusty Staub's one-out single into right field.

In other National League games, Los Angeles blanked Pittsburgh 7-0, Houston shut out Montreal 6-0, Atlanta beat Philadelphia 7-3, St. Louis edged San Francisco 4-3 and San Diego downed Chicago 2-1.

In the Reds' half of the eighth, Phillips made an excellent relay from short left field to the plate on Ken Griffey's double to nail Pete Rose trying to score the go-ahead run. Phillips then led off the Mets' half of the eighth with a single, went to second on Del Unser's infield hit and scored on Staub's single.

Rose opened the game with his fly to right center which landed atop the fence and bounced over for a homer. Griffey followed with a one-hop double off the fence, advanced to third on Joe Morgan's groundout and scored on Dan Driessen's infield single.

But Seaver only allowed the Reds only three hits the rest of the way in improving his record to 4-3.

John Milner drove in the Mets' first two runs with a second-inning solo homer and a groundout in the fourth.

Ron Cey tripled, had a run-scoring double and scored once as Don Sutton became the first seven-game winner in the major leagues with the Dodgers victory over the Pirates. Sutton gave up eight hits, all singles, in raising his record to 7-1 for the year.

Roger Metzger drove in three runs and Larry Dierker shut out Montreal on five hits to lead the Astros to victory over the Expos. Houston took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Roger Metzger singled, Cesar Cedeno walked and Jose Cruz singled Metzger home.

Earl Williams hit a two-run home run in the first inning and Ralph Garr added a three-run homer in the fourth to power the Braves over the Phillies. Philadelphia committed four errors and only two of the seven Atlanta runs off losing pitcher Wayne Twitchell were earned.

Ted Simmons' two-run home run capped a four-run first-inning which featured four straight extra-base hits as the Cardinals completed a three-game sweep over the Giants.

Hector Torres singled with two out scoring Dave Winfield in the top of the eighth inning to lift the Padres and Dave Freisen past the Cubs. Torres' hit, a line drive to right field, came off Bill Bonham. Winfield had opened the inning by drawing a walk, Mike Ivie popped up and Randy Hundley flied out and Winfield stole second. Steve Huntz was walked intentionally, but Torres delivered his game-winning blow.

Steve Busby pitched a five-hitter and aggressive base running by Hal McRae and Harmon Killebrew, who stole his first base in four years, keyed a three-run fourth-inning Sunday to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 4-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Steve Busby allowed only one in the last six innings and recorded his first shutout of the season.

McRae stretched a routine single into a double with two out in the fourth and Killebrew followed with a run-scoring single before stealing his first base since 1971, also against Milwaukee. Cookie Rojas then drove in Killebrew with a single, went to second on the throw home and scored on a single by Frank White.

In other American League games, Texas defeated Detroit 11-7, Cleveland nipped Chicago 4-3 in 11 innings, Boston whipped California 5-2, Oakland stopped New York 7-5, and Minnesota topped Baltimore 6-4 in the first game of a doubleheader before dropping the nightcap 9-3.

Leo Cardenas' first home run in three seasons highlighted a five-run fifth inning that enabled Texas to build up a big enough lead for its victory over Detroit and sweep their three-game series. Ferguson Jenkins won his fifth straight game for the Rangers, although he pitched five ineffective innings. Tom McCraw's single in the 11th inning and two Chicago errors on the same play brought in two runs and gave Cleveland its victory over Chicago, snapping a five-game losing streak.

Rico Petrocelli and Rick Burleson each singled home two runs and designated hitter Jim Rice contributed a solo homer as Boston edged California. Southpaw Bill Lee scattered seven hits in hurling the Red Sox to their seventh victory in eight games.

Joe Rudi drove in three runs, the first two with a bases-loaded batter to key a six-run third-inning rally, and the third on a solo homer in the seventh while leading Oakland over the Yankees. Vida Blue, kayoed in the seventh on a two-run homer by Bobby Bonds that cut Oakland's lead to a run, gained credit for the victory to become the American League's first seven-game winner.

Bob Grich's second home run of the game ignited the Orioles' most explosive inning of the season as Baltimore erupted behind Jim Palmer to win the nightcap after Minnesota grabbed a doubleheader.

The Twins hammered first game loser Mike Cuellar during a four-run fifth inning sparked by Steve Brye's two-run double. Bert Blyleven struck out eight batters and survived a three-run sixth inning as well as a solo home run by rookie Doug DeCinces.

Rains Delay Nelson Meet Until Monday

DALLAS (UPI) — A Spring thunderstorm whipped by strong winds Sunday washed out the championship round of the $175,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

PGA officials suspended play at 12:55 p.m. EDT with 46 players on the course. The lead group of Monty Kaser and Butch Baird were through 15 holes.

Bruce Crampton, Bob Eastwood and Rod Funseth, tied for the lead at 10 under par 203, were not on the course.

The washout was the first since the third round of the Hawaiian Open. PGA officials reset the final round for Monday at the 6,983-yard Preston Trails course.

"It is just too wet," PGA tournament supervisor Wade Cagle said. "The greens are under water. Due to the late hour, there was no way we could get around to play under darkness."

Oklahoma Seeks 4th

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Oklahoma goes after its fourth straight Big Eight Conference baseball title Tuesday.

The Sooners are hosts to second-place Nebraska in the first two games of a three-game series and need only one victory to wrap it all up. The third game of the series is Wednesday.

If the Sooners lose all three games, Nebraska would win the championship. At present, Oklahoma is 12-3 and the Huskers 7-5. A three-game sweep by the Huskers would give the two clubs identical won-lost percentages but Nebraska would win the crown for taking the Oklahoma series.

"We'll try to play Nebraska one game at a time," says Sooners Coach Enos Semore. "I tell you, Nebraska is the type of club that could sweep all three games if we don't play well."

The only other unfinished conference business is a three-game series that finds Oklahoma State at Missouri Monday and Tuesday. If the Huskers get beat and O-State wins, the Cowboys could jump all the way into second place.

Crampton, a native Australian who has never won his adopted hometown tournament, grabbed a share of the lead Saturday with a 6-foot birdie putt on the par-4, 429-yard 18th hole. He hit his second shot 167 yards to the green and the ball skimmed by the lip.

He eagled No. 18 with a 148-yard wedge shot from the rough Friday and another eagle would have given him sole possession of first place.

Eastwood shot his second straight 6-under-par 65 Saturday, his best two rounds since joining the tour in 1969. Watson, who equaled the course record 63 Friday, shot a 2-under-par 69.

Tom Watson, Bob E. Smith and Miller Barber were knotted at 9 under and one stroke off the pace. Jack Ewing, George Knudson and second-round leader Larry Nelson were bunched at third at 8 under on the par 35-36-71, oak tree-lined course.

Only four teams were in action over the weekend. Kansas State wrapped up its season Sunday by beating Kansas 4-3 in 11 innings, giving the Wildcats the series two games to one.

Colorado ended its campaign Saturday with an easy 10-4 triumph over Iowa State. With the victory, the Buffs took the three-game set 2-1.

Kansas State finished its conference season with a 9-9 record. Kansas was 4-15, Colorado 6-9 and Iowa State 11-9.

Monday — Oklahoma State at Missouri 2.

Tuesday — Oklahoma State at Missouri; Nebraska at Oklahoma 2.

Wednesday — Nebraska at Oklahoma; Wartburg at Iowa State 2.

Friday and Saturday — Nebraska Omaha at Iowa State.

Tom Seaver came back from a 400-foot home run by Pete Rose and a 2-0 deficit in the first inning to pitch the New York Mets to a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds Sunday, ending the Mets' six-game losing streak.

Mike Phillips scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning on Rusty Staub's one-out single into right field.

In other National League games, Los Angeles blanked Pittsburgh 7-0, Houston shut out Montreal 6-0, Atlanta beat Philadelphia 7-3, St. Louis edged San Francisco 4-3 and San Diego downed Chicago 2-1.

In the Reds' half of the eighth, Phillips made an excellent relay from short left field to the plate on Ken Griffey's double to nail Pete Rose trying to score the go-ahead run. Phillips then led off the Mets' half of the eighth with a single, went to second on Del Unser's infield hit and scored on Staub's single.

Rose opened the game with his fly to right center which landed atop the fence and bounced over for a homer. Griffey followed with a one-hop double off the fence, advanced to third on Joe Morgan's groundout and scored on Dan Driessen's infield single.

But Seaver only allowed the Reds only three hits the rest of the way in improving his record to 4-3.

John Milner drove in the Mets' first two runs with a second inning solo homer and a groundout in the fourth.

Ron Cey tripled, had a run-scoring double and scored once as Don Sutton became the first seven-game winner in the major leagues with the Dodgers victory over the Pirates. Sutton gave up eight hits, all singles, in raising his record to 7-1 for the year.

Roger Metzger drove in three runs and Larry Dierker shut out Montreal on five hits to lead the Astro's to victory over the Expos. Houston took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Roger Metzger singled, Cesar Cedeno walked and Jose Cruz singled Metzger home.

Earl Williams hit a two-run home run in the first inning and Ralph Garr added a three-run homer in the fourth to power the Braves over the Phillies. Philadelphia committed four errors and only two of the seven Atlanta runs off losing pitcher Wayne Twitchell were earned.

Ted Simmons' two-run home run capped a four-run first inning which featured four straight extra-base hits as the Cardinals completed a three-game sweep over the Giants.

Hector Torres singled with two out scoring Dave Winfield in the top of the eighth inning to lift the Padres and Dave Freisleben past the Cubs. Torres' hit, a line drive to right field, came off Bill Bonham. Winfield had opened the inning by drawing a walk, Mike Ivie popped up and Randy Hundley flied out and Winfield stole second. Steve Huntz was walked intentionally, but Torres delivered his game-winning blow.

Steve Busby pitched a five-hitter and aggressive base running by Hal McRae and Harmon Killebrew, who stole his first base in four years, keyed a three-run fourth inning Sunday to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 4-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Steve Busby allowed only one in the last six innings and recorded his first shutout of the season.

McRae stretched a routine single into a double with two out in the fourth and Killebrew followed with a run-scoring single before stealing his first base since 1971, also against Milwaukee. Cookie Rojas then drove in Killebrew with a single, went to second on the throw home and scored on a single by Frank White.

In other American League games, Texas defeated Detroit 11-7, Cleveland nipped Chicago 4-3 in 11 innings, Boston whipped California 5-2, Oakland stopped New York 7-5, and Minnesota topped Baltimore 6-4 in the first game of a doubleheader before dropping the nightcap 9-3.

Leo Cardenas' first home run in three seasons highlighted a five-run fifth inning that enabled Texas to build up a big enough lead for its victory over Detroit and sweep their three-game series. Ferguson Jenkins won his fifth straight game for the Rangers, although he pitched five ineffective innings. Tom McCraw's single in the 11th inning and two Chicago errors on the same play brought in two runs and gave Cleveland its victory over Chicago, snapping a five-game losing streak.

Rico Petrocelli and Rick Burleson each singled home two runs and designated hitter Jim Rice contributed a solo homer as Boston edged California. Southpaw Bill Lee scattered seven hits in hurling the Red Sox to their seventh victory in eight games.

Joe Rudi drove in three runs, the first two with a bases-loaded single to key a six-run third inning rally, and the third on a solo homer in the seventh while leading Oakland over the Yankees. Vida Blue, kayoed in the seventh on a two-run homer by Bobby Bonds that cut Oakland's lead to a run, gained credit for the victory to become the American League's first seven-game winner.

Bob Grich's second home run of the game ignited the Orioles' most explosive inning of the season as Baltimore erupted behind Jim Palmer to win the nightcap after Minnesota grabbed a doubleheader.

The Twins hammered first game loser Mike Cuellar during a four-run fifth inning sparked by Steve Brye's two-run double. Bert Blyleven struck out eight batters and survived a three-run sixth inning as well as a solo home run by rookie Doug DeCinces.

'Friendly' Races For US Team In China

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Uncle Sam's AAU track and field members depart for China Monday completely in accord over who should be awarded the first gold medal.

It should go, they agree, to whomever decided that no point scores will be kept in the three meets between the U.S. and the People's Republic of China at Canton, May 18-19; at Shanghai, May 23-24; and at Peking, May 27-28.

The meets are being called strictly "friendly" ones and that's the way all 66 athletes — 43 men and 23 women — on the U.S. team seem to want it.

Ken McBryde, 22-year-old triple jumper from Mt. Vernon, N.Y., feels the same way about the points scores being eliminated as do the others on the team.

"It's the best thing that could have happened," he says. "Too much emphasis is always put on winning. The fact they're not going to keep score this time doesn't mean I'm not going to try to do my best, but this is supposed to be a 'good will' series between us and the Chinese and the thing that builds good will is competing, not winning or losing.

"Personally, I'll be more than satisfied if I make a good jump and get a decent workout and maybe help someone else, either one of my teammates or the Chinese. To me, that's what good will means."

The other athletes gathered here from all parts of the country say essentially the same thing as McBryde.

They mean to go all out and make the best showing they can, but if the Chinese beat them their feeling seems to be, so what?

"I endured a lot of headache to make this trip," points out McBryde, who competed in the 1972 Olympic trials at Eugene, Ore. but didn't qualify for Munich. "I just got a job as a recreation supervisor in Mt. Vernon and, now that I'm gone, I don't know whether I'm going to get paid or not. That could make it a little rough on my wife and daughter."

McBryde has been triple jumping ever since he was a sophomore in high school. His specialty is an outgrowth of the old hop, skip and jump. and McBryde's best leap so far has been 54 feet, 2 inches — three feet off the world record.

A triple jumper takes a severe physical beating, according to McBryde.

"More so than a high jumper, distance runner or any other track and field competitor," he claims. "You have to have a tremendous nervous system to keep on competing. You get pinched nerves, bruised heels, bone spurs, muscle pulls, hamstrings, everything. I was in

Ali Ready To Face Lyle

By The Associated Press

Muhammad Ali will meet Ron Lyle Friday night at Las Vegas, Nev., in the first live home telecast of a heavyweight championship fight in three years.

The last time a heavyweight title bout was shown on home television was when Joe Frazier stopped Ron Stander in five rounds at Omaha, Neb., May 25, 1972.

It will be Ali's second title defense since he regained the championship by knocking out

George Foreman in eight rounds in Zaire last Oct. 30 and he already has signed for another one—against Joe Bugner of Britain in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, June 30.

'Friendly' Races For US Team In China

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Uncle Sam's AAU track and field members depart for China Monday completely in accord over who should be awarded the first gold medal.

It should go, they agree, to whoever decided that no point scores will be kept in the three meets between the U.S. and the People's Republic of China at Canton, May 18-19; at Shanghai, May 23-24; and at Peking, May 27-28.

The meets are being called strictly "friendly" ones and that's the way all 66 athletes—43 men and 23 women—on the U.S. team seem to want it.

Ken McBryde, 22-year-old triple jumper from Mt. Vernon, N.Y., feels the same way about the points scores being eliminated as do the others on the team.

"It's the best thing could have happened," he says. "Too much emphasis is always put on winning. The fact they're not going to keep score this time doesn't mean I'm not going to try to do my best, but this is supposed to be a 'good will' series between us and the Chinese and the thing that builds good will is competing, not winning or losing.

"Personally, I'll be more than satisfied if I make a good jump and get a decent workout and maybe help someone else, either one of my teammates or the Chinese. To me, that's what good will means."

The other athletes gathered here from all parts of the country say essentially the same thing as McBryde.

They mean to go all out and make the best showing they can, but if the Chinese beat them their feeling seems to be, so what?

"I endured a lot of headache to make this trip," points out McBryde, who competed in the 1972 Olympic trials at Eugene, Ore. but didn't qualify for Munich. "I just got a job as a recreation supervisor in Mt. Vernon and, now that I'm gone, I don't know whether I'm going to get paid or not. That could make it a little rough on my wife and daughter."

specialty is an outgrowth of the old hop, skip and jump, and McBryde's best leap so far has been 54 feet, 2 inches—three feet off the world record.

A triple jumper takes a severe physical beating, according to McBryde.

"More so than a high jumper, distance runner or any other track and field competitor," he claims. "You have to have a tremendous nervous system to keep on competing. You get pinched nerves, bruised heels, bone spurs, muscle pulls, hamstrings, everything. I was in the hospital for two weeks once and I wasn't even allowed to get up. Why, I've been jumping with a pinched nerve in my back since 1970. But I take it pretty much for granted by now."

Young Captures Tara Tourney

ATLANTA (UPI) — Donna Caponi Young withstood a torrid late surge by Sandra Palmer Sunday to win the Lady Tara Golf Classic by a single stroke.

Miss Palmer, the leading moneywinner on this year's women's tour, had trailed by eight strokes with eight holes left to play, but a hole-in-one backed by two straight birdies enabled her to turn Sunday's back nine in five under par.

That forced Mrs. Young to play cautiously over the final three holes to avoid backing into a playoff as she did here last year, when she blew a three-stroke lead and then lost a sudden death playoff to Sandra Spuzich.

Mrs. Young, two-time women's U.S. Open champion and winner earlier this year in the Burdine's Open at Miami, had a one-under-par 72 Sunday and a three-day total of five-under-par 214.

That was a stroke better than both Miss Palmer and Gloria Ehret, who was playing in the final threesome of the day with Mrs. Young. Palmer had a four-under-par 69, one of only three rounds that low in the tournament, and Miss Ehret had a 71 for their 215s.

Kathy Whitworth, alltime leading moneywinner on the LPGA tour, had a 71-216 to take fourth place and Susie McAllister was fifth at 217.

Fire Destroys 12,000 Acres In Michigan

Grayling, Mich. (AP) — More than 12,000 acres of land were destroyed during the weekend as the worst forest fires in seven years scorched northern lower Michigan.

Charles Bomaster, a fire supervisor for the State Department of Natural Resources, said Sunday that all fires were contained and near control. One in the Camp Grayling area was extinguished, he said.

One firefighter was reported injured, but the extent of his injuries was not immediately known.

There were no reports of homes destroyed, but several homes were threatened and some unoccupied backwoods cabins were ruttled.

Hospital Exhibit Set

Fire Destroys 12,000 Acres In Michigan

Grayling, Mich. (AP) — More than 12,000 acres of land were destroyed during the weekend as the worst forest fires in seven years scorched northern lower Michigan.

Charles Bomaster, a fire supervisor for the State Department of Natural Resources, said Sunday that all fires were contained and near control. One in the Camp Grayling area was extinguished, he said.

One firefighter was reported injured, but the extent of his injuries was not immediately known.

There were no reports of homes destroyed, but several homes were threatened and some unoccupied backwoods cabins were rutt.

Boys Town To Honor Mrs. Tracy

Omaha (AP) — Mrs. Spencer Tracy, widow of the Oscar-winning actor, will receive Boys Town's first Father E. J. Flanagan Award for service to youth.

The award, in recognition for Mrs. Tracy's longtime work with deaf and hard-of-hearing youth in Los Angeles, will be presented at a luncheon June 26 here.

In announcing the new award, the Rev. Robert P. Hupp, Boys Town director, said it will be given whenever the home's directors feel a person's accomplishments merit it.

The award will be a bronze statuette of the home's symbol, a boy carrying his little brother, with the inscription: "He ain't heavy, father, he's my brother."

Tracy received a Motion Picture Academy Award for his portrayal of Father Flanagan in the film, "Boys Town" in 1938. Tracy's Oscar is on display in the Boys Town museum. Father Flanagan founded Boys Town.

TV Sets Take Lead

New York (UPI) — There are more television sets than bathtubs in American homes. A survey by RCA shows there are now some 121 million color and monochrome television sets in American homes, or more than the number of bathtubs, automobiles, washing machines or refrigerators in use, and not far behind the ubiquitous telephone.

Falling Rocks Kill Climbers In Himalayas

London (AP)—Two British army officers were killed in the Himalayas while training to climb Mt. Everest, the Defense Ministry said Sunday.

Maj. Gerald Francis Owens, 37, of the Worcestershire Regiment, and Capt. Richard Summerton, 29, of the Royal Engineers, were hit by falling rocks as they tested equipment on the slopes of Mt. Nuptse, the ministry said.

They and two other members of the 24-man Everest team had climbed to 23,500 feet in a bid to reach Mt. Nuptse's 25,800-foot peak. Nuptse has been climbed only once before.

The British are scheduled to try and climb 29,028-foot Mt. Everest next spring.

Bomb Breaks Villa Windows

Cannes, France (AP)—A plastic explosive charge on Sunday broke all the windows in the private villa of French millionaire aircraft manufacturer Marcel Dassault, whose company produces the Mirage fighter bomber.

Dassault was not in the villa at the time and no injuries were reported.

The blast came 48 hours after a similar explosion damaged the headquarters of the Cannes Film Festival. A pamphlet found outside Dassault's villa said both attacks were directed against "perversion by money and the cinema."

Land Bank Reaches $1.5 Billion In Loans

Omaha (UPI) — The Federal Land Bank of Omaha, which makes long-term loans to farmers and ranchers in a four-state area, said Sunday it has reached a record in $1.5 billion in loans outstanding.

"Never has the volume of lending been so heavy, nor have farmers and ranchers faced such difficult operation and management decisions," said Bank President Arthur Buffington of Omaha. "We have less certainty in security value and income estimates than any time in my career."

Buffington said the land bank made a record-breaking $185 million in loans on land during the first four months of 1975, compared with $104 million during the same period last year.

Buffington said the "lowest interest rate possible is still our goal — and rates will come down in the foreseeable future if the downward trend promises to be a reality."

"The bank is looking at the earliest opportunity to lower rates," Buffington said. "Based on what really does evolve in this cloudy, uncertain monetary and economic atmosphere."

The bank is a cooperative lending institution owned by its nearly 55,000 member-borrowers in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ BY SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Monday

Virgo can serve — and also demand. It usually is this for that where the native is concerned. Virgo does not look for something for nothing — and also expects others to be realistic about basic duties, obligations. Virgo can make money with Libra, but to Capricorn, sign legal documents with Pisces, hold spirited discussions with Scorpio, seances with Leo and travel with Taurus. Virgo should be a most significant month for Virgo in 1975. Domestic adjustment occurs this month, May.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Strike an independent stance. Be firm, original and creative. Save what you mean and what you say. Accent is on straightening out communications problem. When this you do, puzzle pieces will fall into place. Leo person shows you the way — in dramatic fashion. 23-Nov. 21: Your ability to learn by teaching is enhanced. Money, hidden matters dominate. Agreement with mate, partner is imperative. One who aided you in past comes forth again. Your youth, to some extent is recaptured.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Changes are required where financial status is concerned. You have been giving out more than you receive, including information. Draw the line. Insist on reciprocal action. Consult a Virgo. You receive meaningful compliment from member of opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home adjustment occurs. You get chance to make up for a mistake. Do so and do it with a smile and goodwill. Cycle is high but you're seeing shadowy threats. Key is to come out in open, say what you mean and get over the emotional hump. You'll see!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You finish rather than begin — you get lowdown on individuals are in picture. Your ability to select quality is put to test. Avoid wishful thinking. Go after hard news. One at a distance could send you some vitamins.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The plot is thickened. You are in it all the way. Now you grow up and face issues as they exist. The "No Exit" signs are lit and you must draw upon experience, maturity and decency.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Universal appeal is highlighted. Means now is time to get finger on pulse of public. You can please without compromising principles. Popularity need not be equated with cheapness. Aries, Libra individuals and figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ability to learn by teaching is enhanced. Money, hidden matters dominate. Agreement with mate, partner is imperative. One who aided you in past comes forth again. Your youth, to some extent is recaptured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be expecting too much, too soon, from the wrong quarters. Be flexible enough to do some re-evaluating. Be creative enough to change direction. Be mature enough to enlarge horizons. You are going to be flattered by one you respect. Enjoy it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be thorough. Eschew get-rich-quick schemes. Relative with rumor is well-meaning but likely to be misinformed. Know it and act accordingly. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo and Scorpio are in picture. Accent is on health, work, debt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends are not enough to get answers required. Money is involved and one who has it must be convinced in your behalf. Be specific, dynamic and down-to-earth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spotlight is on home, property, payments necessary for basic needs. Domestic or family situation commands more attention than usual. Taurus, Libra persons are in picture. One "at the top" is willing to make room for you.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, have fine sense of humor, love food (sometimes too much), are attractive, active, fond of travel. This month, May, should be one of your most significant periods of the year. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You are versatile, restless and you can adapt to a variety of conditions. Important contacts will be made in 1975 — and they will bear fruit in 1977.

(Learn "The Truth About Astrology," send birthday (four or survey) and 75 cents to Omarr Books, The Lincoln Star, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053. You'll open door to fascinating study and self-revelation!)
